CANNON SURRENDERS; FOR ROOSEVELT PLAN

Is Not Averse to Anti-Injunction Bill and Sherman Law Amendments.

PRESIDENT'S WRATH FEARED

Republicans Who Are Troubled by Revolts at Home Overturn the House Machine's Programme.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—After having seen his House machine rolled aside by a combination of Republicans and Democrats on the question of giving the Interstate Commerce Commission $350,000 to investigate railroad accounts, Speaker Cannon to-night made a sudden change of front on measures desired by President Roosevelt. Representative Townsend of Michigan, who had taken the lead in an effort to smash the Cannon do-nothing programme, received assurances from the Speaker, conveyed through Representative Watson of Indiana, the Republican "whip" in the House, that the Speaker was not adverse to action at this session of Congress on an anti-injunction law and a law to amend the Sherman anti-trust act. Bills for this purpose would be reported within a few days to the House from the Judiciary Committee, it was said, and an injunction bill was introduced by Sereno E. Payne, the Republican leader, to-day.

This action grew out of a step taken by Mr. Townsend to obtain the signatures of enough Republican members to call a caucus to commit the majority favorable to these measures, on which Mr. Roosevelt has insisted. Mr. Townsend's proposal was carried to the Speaker by Mr. Watson, and the reply brought by him to Mr. Townsend was as stated.

The insurrection of the Roosevelt Republicans in the House is the result of the determination of the Cannon machine to block the President's programme. It came to a head to-day on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, when the Speaker's adherents tried to keep down to $50,000 the appropriation for keeping track of railway accounts. When that plan had been upset, the insurgent Republicans took courage and there was talk of carrying the smashing process to extreme lengths. Late at night came the Townsend announcement.

An Unprecedented Situation.

No such situation as this had arisen in the memory of men who have been watching sessions of Congress for many years. Not even President Cleveland came as near to a complete block with Congress as had been reached. The President was alternately angry and disgusted at the manner in which his recommendations were treated, and there were indications that he was mapping out a line of action which would have a bitter result for some of his opponents in his own party.

It was pointed out in Administration circles that every district and State Convention which had been held for the election of delegates to the Chicago Convention had given an enthusiastic indorsement of the President and the Roosevelt policies. Still Congress did nothing toward enacting the legislation demanded by the President to carry out those policies. In a short time Congress would adjourn, and the men who have been blocking the President's plans would go back to their districts and seek renomination and reelection.

They would have to ask the same men who have just indorsed the President to indorse them for refusing to do what the President asked. It became a question whether some of them could get such an indorsement.

President Helps Congressmen.

It has always been the custom for the President to help along the Congressional campaign, and he has often given his assistance in individual districts. In the last campaign, two years ago, he wrote a letter to Representative Watson of Indiana, the Republican whip of the House, which was a general certificate of good character for all the Republicans. It was used with telling effect throughout the campaign.

The friends of the President have always contended that it was due to that letter that the Republicans obtained a majority in this House. The indications are that the men whom it would help most were looking confidently to see a similar letter written this year.

The President will not give any general certificate of character this year. Just how far he will go in refusing to assist some of the House Republicans in their fight for re-election cannot be said, but it can be declared, and with emphasis, that those who were responsible for the blocking of his legislative programme need not expect anything from him.

He will not fail to support the men who have supported him, and there will be no uncertainty as to those cases. But when men who have been fighting his legislation all this session come to him with requests for letters or other indorsement they will be turned down hard. That is the word which comes from Administration men, and is believed by the politicians to whom it has been communicated.

It is pointed out as an evidence of how effective is the failure of the President to support a man that lack of Roosevelt assistance decisively defeated James W. Wadsworth two years ago in a district which Wadsworth had owned for years. If other Republican leaders meet the same sort of Roosevelt encouragement this year there will be several vacancies in their ranks when the next Congress meets.

Cannon Uses the Whip.

Speaker Cannon has maintained the House in its attitude of opposition to Roosevelt throughout the sesssion only by the most vigorous application of the organization whip. He faced insurrection on a number of measures, so that his only means of safety was the flat refusal to permit any of them to be brought up on the floor for discussion or vote.

The result was a rising tide of rebellion in his own party, which the Democrats have seen with unalloyed delight. There are forty or fifty Republicans who are already in serious trouble in their districts because their loyalty to Cannon has put them in opposition to Roosevelt. Especially is this true of the Western men.

The safety of these men was in the chance that they might yet be able to get

DAY'S SENIORS ON STRIKE.

Smith College Class Rebels Against Chancellor's Dismissal of Dean Kent.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 30.—As an outcome of the notice sent a week ago to Dean William Kent of the Lyman C. Smith College of Applied Science that his services would not be required after this term, the senior class of the college went on a strike to-day.

Resolutions passed last week criticising the action of the Executive Committee of the Syracuse University Trustees resulted in the men who signed the resolution being suspended by Chancellor James R. Day until such time as the class retracted those portions of the resolutions which criticised the action of the Trustees. The entire class was later notified that if the resolutions were not retracted their graduation would not be permitted.

A little before noon to-day the seniors in the mechanical engineering courses went to the Chancellor's office and laid the matter before him. The men explained that they were greatly disappointed that Dean Kent was compelled to leave, and that they had passed resolutions in the hope that the Trustees would reconsider their action. The Chancellor replied that the men were at perfect liberty to praise the Dean, but that certain portions of the resolutions were in fact an indictment of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, and that such portions of the resolutions showed insubordination and must be withdrawn.

The meeting lasted for nearly an hour, and created much excitement among the other seniors in the college, who gathered in groups outside and speculated on the result. During the meeting, when the rumor became current that the whole class had been expelled, a sign reading "To Rent" was posted over the doorway of the College of Applied Science.

Whereas, The charge has been made that our loved Dean, William Kent, has "been a disappointment to the administration" of Syracuse University; that his "usefulness as Dean of the College of Applied Science is at an end," and that "his continued presence among us would be increasingly prejudical to the peace and success of the university," be it

Resolved, That we, the senior class of the Lyman C. Smith College of Applied Science, having been closely associated with the Dean for four years, express ourselves as knowing him to be an educator of the highest rank, a man of rare tact and executive ability, and, above all, a man who commands the respect and admiration of every unprejudiced man with whom he comes in contact; and be it further

Resolved, That we, believing the charges to be unjust and without foundation in fact, express our sincere regret at the action of the Executive Committee, and enter our protest against said action.

ELMER T. GRAVES,
ACKLEY E. BLOCHER,
JOSEPH W. KELLOGG,
Committee.

Dean Kent's dismissal followed his criticism of the construction of the Lyman C. Smith College. He declared it was a fire trap, and asked to have the defects remedied. To-day he gave out a letter from Frank J. Fertig, Insurance Inspector of the Ohio Department of the Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Companies, supporting his contention. Mr. Fertig made an examination of the college and in his report condemned the arrangement of the building and the lack of facilities for escape in case of fire.

MISS GREEN'S DELUSION.

To Bellevue for Imagining She's a Beneficiary of E. R. Thomas.

Miss Charlotte Green of 400 St. Nicholas Avenue was taken from the New York Life Building at 346 Broadway to Bellevue Hospital yesterday afternoon, where she was placed in the pyschopathic ward for observation.

According to the police, shortly after noon Miss Green visited a lawyer in Broadway, and insisted that he accompany her to the offices of the life insurance company and inquire about the will of E. R. Thomas. She insisted that she was a beneficiary in the will. She was taken to the beneficiary department, and after she had talked with Supt. Lucia was persuaded to leave the building, whereupon the lawyer called a policeman, and had her removed to the hospital.

Miss Green is an attractive woman of refined appearance, and does not look to be more than 22 years of age.

Miss Green gave as her nearest friend Mrs. Isaac Shiek of 551 Madison Avenue, and said that she was a stenographer and had been in the city for seven months. She said that her father's name was "David Green," and that her mother's name had been "Rose Springwater." She was not taken to the hospital as a prisoner.

Several hundred Austrians and Italians who had been employed at the quarries before the panic were not re-employed when the Amalgamated Copper Company resumed, and Wycklund had frequently received letters threatening his life.

240 JAPANESE LOST WHEN WARSHIP SINKS

HAD JUST REACHED MAKANG

Rescue Boats Saved 175 of Her Complement of 415—Prominent Japanese Families Bereaved.

TOKIO, April 30.—Admiral Moshimatsu, commander of the training squadron, reports that the training cruiser Matsushima was sunk at 4:08 o'clock this morning while anchoring at Makang, a harbor in the Pescadores Islands, and that 240 of her complement of 415 men were drowned.

The sinking of the cruiser was due to an unexplained explosion in the stern magazine. The vessel instantly settled into the water until only the bridge was visible. Boats at once were sent to the rescue from the cruisers Hashaidate and Itsukushima. These boats saved 141 men and a number of officers and cadets, but a majority of both officers and cadets were not saved.

There were fifty-eight cadets on the vessel. The sons of Baron Chinda, Vice Minister of the Foreign Office, and of Prince Oyama, Field Marshal, are among the cadets who it is feared are lost. It is also understood that Capts. Name, Yoshimori, and Yashiro have been drowned.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Commander Taniguchi, the Naval Attaché of the Japanese Embassy, said to-day that the regular complement of the Matsushima was 355 men, and that on her cruise she had about 50 cadets aboard, making a total of about 415. His cablegram, he said, indicates that about 175 were saved, which would make the loss of officers and men about 240. Those saved include 8 officers, 24 cadets, 7 non-commissioned officers, and 141 of the crew.

The Matsushima is a protected cruiser, built in 1900. Her displacement is 4,237 tons, length 295 feet, and indicated horse power 5,400. She has two decks and twelve gun positions. Her armament consists of one 12.6-inch Canet gun, twelve 4.7-inch quick-firers, five six-pounder quick-firers, eleven three-pounder quick-firers, and six machine guns. She has also four torpedo tubes. She has no armor, but her deck is protected by plates an inch an a half thick.

The Matsushima took part in the Russo-Japanese war. She was instrumental in November of 1904 in sending to the bottom three Russian torpedo boats that were attempting to escape from Port Arthur. These Russian vessels were trying to carry out duplicates of a dispatch from Gen. Stoessel. The Matsushima also took part in the battle of the Sea of Japan in 1905.

The last notable accident in the Japanese Navy occurred Sept. 9, 1907, through the explosion of a projectile on the battleship Kashima. Most of the men who were handling the gun were killed. The explosion occurred behind the gun shield, and the concussion did great damage to the ship.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Newberry to-day sent the following cablegram to the American Naval Attaché at Tokio, who is directed to present it to the Japanese officials:

"Express to the Minister of Marine deep sorrow and sympathy of department and American Navy at terrible accident on board Matsushima, in which many gallant Japanese officers and men are reported to have lost their lives."

CADET SHIPS FARE BADLY.

There have been a great many serious accidents to foreign naval training ships in recent years.

On Dec. 16, 1905, the German training frigate Gneisenau foundered at the entrance to the Port of Malaga, Spain. The commander of the vessel, several other officers, and over 100 naval cadets were drowned.

The Belgian training ship Comte de Smelt de Nayer was the next cadet ship lost. She went down in the Bay of Biscay on April 18, 1906, and thirty-five of her complement were lost, among them the Captain of the vessel and the commandant of the cadets.

On Nov. 25, 1906, the French torpedo schoolship Algeciras, which was lying in Toulon Harbor, was destroyed by fire. It is not known whether the fire was caused by an explosion or not. Of the 500 on board the vessel all but three were saved.

In August of last year there was an explosion in the breech of one of the guns on the French training ship Couronne while she was lying in Toulon Harbor. Three men were killed and seven wounded.

The last disaster on a training ship prior to the sinking of the Matsushima was in November last, when the boilers of the German schoolship Blücher exploded. The accident happened near Murwick. Ten men were killed and thirty seriously wounded.

SEARCH FOR MISSING PRIEST.

Father Caulfield of Washington, N. J., Disappeared in New York Last Week.

WASHINGTON, N. J., April 30.—The Rev. Father John Caulfield, pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church here, has not been seen nor heard from since last Thursday, when he left another priest in New York, ostensibly to board a Lackawanna train to return to this place. Several members of the congregation, under the guidance of Father Kelly of Oxford and Father William Tighe of Hampton Junction, left here to-day for New York to try and locate the missing priest.

Father Caulfield is about 35 years of age, rather slender, of medium height, and unusually fine features. He was extremely popular here and at Hackettstown.

No Insurance Offer to Gray.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 30.—Judge George Gray said to-day, referring to the statement reported to have been made by a speaker at a Gray Club meeting in Princeton, N. J., on April 17 that he had received from a New York insurance company an offer of its Presidency at a salary of $200,000, that the statement was untrue.

REJECT TWO BISHOPS.

Low Church Laity Block Work of Delaware Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, Del., April 30.—The Rev. Dr. Samuel Hart of Hartford and the Rev. Dr. George Lee Bliss of Burlington, Vt., were successively rejected by the lay section of the convention to-day after they had been named for Bishop of Delaware, to succeed the late Rev. Leighton Coleman, by the clerical section. In each instance their High Church leanings were responsible for their rejection, it is said.

The election was finally put over till the regular meeting of the convention at Wilmington in June. On the twenty-ninth ballot the clerical members gave the necessary two-thirds vote for the Rev. Dr. Samuel Hart, custodian of the American Book of Common Prayer of Hartford, Conn., the vote being ten for Dr. Hart, three for Bishop Partridge of Kioto, Japan, and two for the Rev. Dr. Nathaniel S. Thomas of Philadelphia.

It was believed that this selection would be ratified by the laymen, and the announcement was made as the clergymen took a recess that he had been elected. But Dr. Hart was overwhelmingly rejected by the lay section, the vote being 43 to 3. The laymen declared that he was too old for the duties of the office.

Again the clerical section balloted, and on the thirty-fourth ballot chose the Rev. Dr. George Lee Bliss of Burlington, Vt. He was rejected also by the laymen by a vote of 26 yeas to 21 nays, a two-thirds vote being necessary. Reason for this action was not specifically given, but one layman shouted: "We want a low churchman for Delaware."

Sixteen rectors, later fifteen, with ten as the necessary vote for election, participated in the clerical convention, which was presided over by the Rev. Kensey Johns Hammond. Forty-five and at one time forty-six laymen, with thirty and thirty-one respectively as the necessary vote, participated in the lay convention presided over by Merritt N. Willis.

PRIEST CATCHES A THIEF.

Father Barry Gives Chase When His Caller Disappears with a Rug.

Father Barry of St. Raphael's Catholic Church ran down a snek thief last night while a crowd of men and boys followed at his heels.

A man who afterward told the police he was Fred. Miller of 214 East Fourth Street called at St. Raphael's rectory, at 502 West Forty-first Street, last night, and told the maid who answered the bell that he wanted to see a priest. Father Barry was just sitting down to tea. He decided to finish his meal before seeing the visitor.

When he entered the reception room the caller had departed, and Father Barry saw that a rug was missing. He ran to the door and looked out. Down the street he saw a man walking along with the rug on his shoulder. Father Barry gave chase in the rain. Miller saw him coming and ran to Tenth Avenue, then down to Fortieth Street, and turned west.

Father Barry, who is athletic, gained at every jump. A crowd tried to keep up with him, but could not. A few feet from the corner of Fortieth Street and Tenth Avenue the man was overtaken. At the West Thirty-seventh Street Police Station he was charged with larceny, and locked up.

HIS SKIN IS PART RABBIT'S.

Newark Man's Life Saved by Long Operation of Skin Grafting.

A story of a life saved by grafting the skin of live rabbits to a man's body was told yesterday in the trial in the Supreme Court in Newark of the case of Antonio Maggio against the J. F. Glasby Lumber Company, in which $30,000 damages are asked.

According to the testimony of Dr. Anthony D'Amico of Newark, Maggio, who was badly scalded by the exploding of a glue melting machine in the lumber company's plant, was on the point of death, when the grafting of the skin of live rabbits on his body saved his life. The operation took four hours.

Maggio was laid up for six months, and has since been a cripple.

The case was not concluded.

KIDNAPPER GETS 16 YEARS.

George B. Hoyt Sentenced to Long Term for Abducting Thomas Larkin.

For kidnapping thirteen-year-old Thomas Larkin of 814 East 166th Street, on Oct. 6, George B. Hoyt of 6 Ball Street, Stamford, Conn., was sentenced yesterday by Judge Crain, on his plea of guilty, to sixteen years in State Prison.

Hoyt, who says he is a decorator, met the Larkin boy, and partly by promises, partly by force, took him to his home at Stamford. Michael Larkin, the boy's father, found his son there after he had been gone for five months.

Hoyt said that his only object in stealing the boy was to "educate him and make a gentleman of him." He made no attempt to get a ransom. Hoyt in December, 1900, was sent to the State Prison in Connecticut for two years for forgery.

HOTEL GUEST IN BELLEVUE.

Mrs. Catherine Bartlett Worried Over a Husband Lost in Panama.

A woman guest of the Aldine Hotel, at 431 Fourth Avenue, ran about the corridors inviting the other guests to have champagne with her last night. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where she will be under observation for five days as to her sanity.

The woman was Mrs. Catherine Bartlett, wife of Dr. Charles Bartlett, a physician, now believed to be in Panama. About three months ago the hospital authorities tried to locate Dr. Bartlett, but were unsuccessful.

Mrs. Bartlett has been brooding over her husband's absence.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 30.—A jury in the United States Circuit Court to-day gave a verdict of $18,500 to Alexander H. G. Maidment of Paterson against the New York Central Railroad for injuries resulting in his right leg being crippled for life, his nervous system shattered, and his automobile wrecked by a collision with a train on the West Shore Railroad at Bogota on Aug. 17, 1906. The plaintiff proved that the flagman was improperly absent from the crossing.

FIRST TRAIN THROUGH SUBWAY EXTENSION

BIG CELEBRATION TO-DAY

Followed by a Civic and Military Parade To-night with Lots of Music and Red Fire.

The extension of the Subway from Brooklyn Borough Hall to the Flatbush-Atlantic Avenue station of the Long Island Railroad was opened at 1:02 o'clock this morning, when the first train ran through from Bowling Green, Manhattan. It was a four-car Lenox Avenue express on its regular trip and was fairly well filled with passengers when it drew into the Bowling Green station. There about fifty Brooklynites who had come over to Manhattan expressly to ride back on the first train boarded the cars.

It was 16 minutes later, or 1:18 o'clock, when the train pulled into the Atlantic Avenue Station. Later it is expected that trains will make the trip in 6 to 8 minutes, but the first train through met with many delays. From Bowling Green to Borough Hall it ran on schedule, but from there to the end of the extension there were many men at work on the tracks, and the train had frequently to slow up until trackmen stepped to one side.

Between the station at Nevins Street and Atlantic Avenue, the next station beyond, the train was held up for two minutes. At the Nevins Street Station, too, came the first cheer for the first train through the extension.

No one had been on the Hoyt Street Station, and at Nevins Street there were no waiting passengers, but there were four negro cleaners employed by the company, and they raised a cheer when the train pulled into the station and another when it left an instant later.

What of a crowd had stayed awake to see the first train gathered at the Atlantic Avenue station. There 600 or 700 people had gathered, and they cheered and waved hats and handkerchiefs as the train drew into the station and came to a stop. Several photographers set off flashlights, and there was something of a gala scene.

The crowds surged into the cars for the trip back to Manhattna, and at 1:20 o'clock the express started back on the return trip.

At 8:30 o'clock this afternoon the official train will go through, starting at the City Hall, Manhattan. In it will be Mayor McClellan and other city officials, August Belmont, and other citizen guests. From the new terminal in Brooklyn they will march to the Baptist Temple, where the Mayor, Mr. Belmont, Borough President Coler of Brooklyn, Seth Low, St. Clair McKelway, and others will speak. Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission will preside.

At the conclusion of the reception and speechmaking in the Baptist Temple the guests will go to the Brooklyn Union League Club, where at 6:30 they are to attend a dinner. One hour and a half later the civic and military pageant in celebration of the Subway opening will start at Borough Hall.

It is expected that over 100,000 people will be lined up along the route.

The troops and various organizations that are going to march in the parade will assemble at Borough Hall at 7:30 o'clock and form into line under the command of Capt. Sydney Grant, the Grand Marshal, ready to start at 8 P. M. sharp.

The military division of the pageant will be composed of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Twenty-third, and Forty-seventh Regiments, Squadron C, and the Second Naval Battalion, under the command of Brig. Gen. John C. Eddy.

The automobile contingent, which has been arranged by Charles Jerome Edwards of the Long Island Automobile Club, will assemble at the Plaza entrance to Prospect Park at 7 o'clock and start for the Borough Hall at 7:30.

Every band in Brooklyn has been engaged for the occasion, in addition to the various regimental bands, as the Board of Aldermen made a liberal appropriation for music. The business houses and residences along the route will be decorated with flags and streamers, the streets will be illuminated by searchlights, and red fire at various points, including the grand stand, which has been erected at Grant Square.

The route of the pageant will be from Borough Hall via Livingston Street, Flatbush Avenue, Lafayette Avenue, and Bedford Avenue to Grant Square. The order of the procession will be: Platoons of police, preceded by mounted patrolmen, Brooklyn Rapid Transit Band, Grand Marshal and staff, Brig Gen. Eddy and staff, Twenty-third Regiment, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Regiments, Forty-seventh Regiment, Thirteenth Coast Artillery Corps, Second Naval Battalion, Third Battery Light Artillery, and Squadron C, followed by the various civic organizations; bands, floats, and the automobile contingent. Various regimental bands will march between each regiment.

Numerous floats have been built for the parade by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, showing the progress made in transportation from the old stagecoach days down to the latest subway cars. In addition the Edison Electric Company, Abraham & Straus, Anderson & Co., Frederick Loeser & Co., and Luna Park will have illuminated floats.

Elaborate preparations have been made by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit traffic managers for handling the expected big crowds at the celebration. Many extra surface cars will be put into use, and various changes from the regular routes of several car lines will be made in order to take the people in a more direct way to Borough Hall.

CAN WATCH THE STOMACH.

German Doctor Finds Way to Observe Its Operations During Life.

MUNICH, April 30.—The problem of direct observation of the interior of the human stomach during life has been solved by Dr. Riehl, according to a medical weekly.

The method employed includes the passing of a double tube through the oesophagus to the stomach, the inner tube being fitted with a small electric bulb. Water is passed by means of a subsidiary attachment through the outer tube, filling the stomach. The light is then turned on, permitting, the medical paper says, the closest observation of the movements of the organ.

It is said this apparatus will be helpful in the study of cancer of the stomach and other internal maladies.

Masked Men Overpower Messenger and Steal $10,000 Near Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., May 1.—A report reached Pittsburg early this morning that the St. Louis Express on the Pennsylvania Railroad had been held up at Walker's Mill, about twenty miles west of Pittsburg, by ten masked men. The express car was broken into, and N. Rosshen, the messenger, was overpowered. He was found unconscious by passengers when the train came to a full stop, and says that ten bags of gold, each containing $1,000 and shipped to St. Louis, had been stolen.

The engineer says that the train was stopped by a man waving a red lantern. Detectives from this city were sent to the scene.

BIG HATS BARRED AT PARADE.

Women Who Will Sit in the Grand Stand Asked to Wear Small Ones.

Edward J. McGuire, Chairman of the Parade Committee, which will manage the big procession of the laity up Fifth Avenue to-morrow, sent out last night the tickets for those who will have grand stand seats. With each ticket there was this formal injunction:

"Ladies should wear small hats."

The request was printed in large type.

Workmen have been busy all week building a huge grand stand around the west, north, and south sides of the cathedral. Several thousand Catholics will be seated there to review the big parade of the laity to-morrow afternoon. Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Farley, and probably Cardinal Logue, with all of the local and visiting clerics, will review the parade, and it is estimated that 40,000 will be in line.

ELEANOR ROBSON ILL.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 30.—A telegram was received to-night by the local Opera House management stating that the engagement of Miss Eleanor Robson would have to be canceled because of the illness of Miss Robson.

BOY TENOR PLEASES CARUSO.

Former Bootblack with Wonderful Voice Is Discovered in Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 30.—A Russian lad of 19 years, Henry Sakolsky, formerly a bootblack, has been "discovered" by members of the Metropolitan Opera Company, which closed the season here yesterday. It is asserted the lad gives promise of developing a voice like that of Caruso, and that the great Italian tenor himself yesterday gave the lad a hearing, and so impressed was Caruso with what he heard that he suggested that the boy be taken up at once and his voice developed.

Eugene Dufriche, Frank Rigo, and Rudolph Ferrari also heard young Sakolsky. So impressed was Dufriche, the aged stage manager of the Metropolitan, that he insisted that a five years' contract be made with Sakolsky. Sakolsky has been in training for four years, and a patron yesterday arranged the audience with Caruso.

GOW WITNESSES MISSING.

Prosecution Hears That One of Them Has Gone to Europe.

It is not expected that the trial of William Gow, who is under indictment for grand larceny, found in connection with the troubles of the Borough Bank, will be proceeded with before the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, next Monday, the date originally set. Several witnesses for the prosecution have disappeared. One of them is reported to be now on the ocean en route to Europe. Nelson P. Burr, an associate of Gow's, has kept himself out of the court's jurisdiction ever since the indictments were found.

After Justice Marean signed the order removing the case to Part I. of the Supreme Court, he directed that the case should be proceeded with Monday. Then it was that District Attorney Clarke found that the witnesses had vanished.

LEOPARDS LOOSE IN CROWD.

Boy Is Badly Clawed, but the Beasts Are Recaptured.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 30.—During a performance at the Zoo to-night, there were several hundred persons in the audience when seven leopards were sent into the arena which is surrounded by high steel bars. Two of these were sulky, and one is said to have been irritated by Louis Long, a boy, who was close to the top of the cage.

This leopard jumped toward the boy and scrambled over the top of the cage. It was immediately followed by another of the beasts. The first clawed Long savagely. The people in the audience were terror-stricken. One of the leopards dashed down the stairway to the office, and Sergeant Barranger slammed the door. Then the crowd rushed toward him, but he held them back until they were calm enough for a few at a time to be permitted to leave the building. On the floor above the arena is a skating rink, and here also the police locked the doors and held in the crowd until all danger of panic was over.

The leopards were cornered, one in the office of the Zoo, and the other in one of the dressing rooms by trainers, and were returned to their cages.

MANY URGE THIRD TERM.

Roosevelt Gets 300 or 400 Such Letters a Day.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—It is asserted on good authority that between three and four hundred letters are received daily at the White House urging President Roosevelt to run again. These come from all parts of the country, it is said, from members of all political parties, and in them various arguments are used by the writers to induce Mr. Roosevelt to again accept a nomination.

They have increased in volume in the last few weeks. The writers argue that the President is in the thick of his campaign for the establishment of complete Government control over inter-State commerce and other reforms; that it is impossible to transfer this work successfully to another, since Mr. Roosevelt's personality is a powerful factor in achieving this success; that the Republican Party cannot afford to nominate any man who is not sure of election, and that the President is the only Republican who would be certain to defeat any other candidate.

In all of his replies to such letters the President simply reminds his correspondents of his former declarations on the subject and reiterates that his position is unchanged.

BIG WIND IN TOWN DOES MUCH DAMAGE

MAY SNOW HERE TO-DAY

Pittsburg Had an After Taste of Winter Yesterday—Bad Weather for Spring Finery.

A rainstorm traveling up from the South and heralded by a forty-five-mile gale reached town early last evening, and made city and suburbs uncomfortable, besides doing extensive damage.

Off Fire Island a square-rigged vessel went aground near Zach's Inlet about 7:15 o'clock at high water. She lay too far out to be reached with a life-line, and late at night the life-saving crew launched their surf boat in a tumbling sea in a desperate attempt to reach her. The vessel was then firing signals of distress. At midnight the life-savers had not returned, and watchers on shore doubted whether the crew would reach their goal.

Costen signals were burned all night to show the crew that help was near, and at low water this morning the vessel can certainly be reached. Meantime the revenue cutter Mohawk is steaming to her.

A three-masted schooner, coming down the East River, was blown about like a piece of paper off the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street, and, the wind shifting, drifted in shore and headed straight for the new stone breakwater in the rear of Bellevue Hospital. Drs. R. O. Baker and J. P. Wall of Bellevue Hospital, fearing that if the schooner struck the wall her long boom would probably pierce it and strike through the isolation ward, just inside the wall, ran to the edge of the pier and yelled through megaphones to the craft. The Captain cast anchor till a tug bound up-stream took the schooner in tow.

The glass vestibule of a Bushwick Avenue car was blown in on the Williamsburg Bridge, and the motorman, James O'Neill of 1,226 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, was severely cut by glass. After taking his car across the bridge he had to turn it over to an inspector and go to the hospital.

Twenty trees were blown down in various parts of Central Park. One large tree on the West Drive, opposite Sixty-fourth Street, was hurled across the drive and blocked the roadway.

Indirectly the storm was the cause of the death of a signal man in Brooklyn, who slipped on the wet ties and, [illegible] the third rail, was shocked to death.

To-day it will be bad weather for straw hats and light clothing. Last night it was snowing in Western Pennsylvania. At Pittsburg the thermometer went down to 32 degrees; there was snow in the Ohio Valley and the lake section, and a northwester, with possible snow flurries, is predicted here to-day.

All this is due to a storm which was central on Wednesday night in the Middle Gulf and moved rapidly north until at 8 o'clock last night it was central in New Jersey.

In town the breeze raced through the canyons of the lower business section, playing havoc with signs and windows. Reports of damage done all over the city came to the police.

An Amsterdam Avenue car went off the track at 125th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, blocking traffic on the uptown tracks for two hours.

The window of Sidney Muller's candy store at 1,280 Amsterdam Avenue was blown in by the wind. Michael O'Neill, who is in the saloon business at 1,606 Amsterdam Avenue, had some stock damaged by the blowing in of the big glass window of his place.

Mrs. Lillian Green of 64 Avenue C was blown by the wind in front of a northbound Second Avenue car at Second Avenue and Seventy-eighth Street, and was so badly bruised that she was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital.

The wind smashed two large plate-glass windows in the front of the Harlem Opera House, in 125th Street.

The sudden rainstorm caused great congestion in the exits and entrances of the uptown Subway stations. Hundreds of men and women who had gone to work without overcoats or umbrellas rushed to the Subway to get home under shelter. The jam was very bad in the first rush hour.

Conditions way uptown were no better. Those who started home early found on alighting that it was raining hard and waited for the rain to stop.

Down at Coney Island and other places on Long Island much damage was done along shore. About a third of the imitation stone work on the front of the Deluge building was wrecked. Some 200 bathing houses, owned by Edward Kojan, at the foot of Kensington Walk, were blown down, and the lumber scattered in all directions.

The twenty soldiers stationed on Plum Island had to move their camp 200 feet back because of the high water. Seaside Park and the Brighton Beach race track were flooded. The cabin launch Edward Riguem, named after her owner, and the auxiliary sloop George Smith, moored at the foot of Emmons Avenue, Sheepshead Bay, got adrift and were carried out to sea.

The storm plunged Richmond Borough into darkness. The high wind and heavy rain knocked down electric wires all over the borough, and after 10:30 and up to 1 o'clock this morning there were no lights on the North Shore. Travel through the streets was dangerous owing to the live wires.

When it was seen that all the lighting circuits were in trouble power was cut off to avoid accidents. There was the same condition in Tottenville and along the east shore below New Dorp. Along the south shore through Tompkinsville and Stapleton the incandescent circuits used for street and commercial lighting were disabled, but the arc lights along the main streets were mostly burning.

ONE DEATH IN THE STORM.

Signalman, Repairing Semaphore, Falls on Third Rail.

The storm which swept over the city last night was the indirect cause of the death of Samuel Gettler, a signalman employed by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

Gettler was stationed on the elevated structure at the East New York loop at Manhattan Junction and Broadway, East New York. After the storm had passed Gettler discovered that one of the sig[illegible] had been damaged so that it failed to work. He left the signal house and started down the tracks to repair it.

A few hundred feet from the station Gettler slipped on the wet ties, lost his balance, and toppled over onto the live third rail. As his body touched it, it bounded into the air and then pitched over the guard rail of the elevated structure and fell into the street.

There were many women in Broadway, and the spectacle of Gettler's body hurtling in the air threw them into a panic. They fled, screaming, but several men picked Gettler up and carried him to the sidewalk. Then they called Dr. Davis from the Bradford Street Hospital.

The surgeon said that the man had been instantly killed by the electric current. Gettler was 26 years old and lived at 172 Delancey Street, Manhattan.

FROST IN MIDDLE WEST.

Many Thousands of Acres of Vegetable Gardens Were Ruined.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Temperatures approaching freezing prevailed to-day over nearly the entire country from the Alleghanies to the Rockies. Frosts occurred as far south as Southern Texas. In many places heavy, wet snow fell, notably throughout Ohio and Kentucky.

Two inches of snow fell throughout Kentucky, but fruit has not been hurt. Traffic was interfered with to some extent. In some towns of Kentucky the snow was the heaviest of the year.

The mercury went down to 27 degrees last night in some parts of Iowa. A killing frost is reported throughout Western Wisconsin and Southern Minnesota. Thousands of acres of garden truck, hundreds of flower beds, and other green products were ruined.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 30.—Snow fell in Rochester and vicinity for a short time this morning, later turning to rain.

FIRE THREATENS JERSEY CITY.

Fierce Blaze Drives 500 Persons from Their Homes.

Every man and piece of apparatus in the Fire Department of Jersey City, N. J., was called out last night to fight a blaze which started in a four-story brick factory and warehouse building running in L shape from 134 Newark Avenue to 181 Grove Street. The blaze threatened for a time to develop into one of the most disastrous which Jersey City has ever experienced, and Chief Conway ordered nearly 500 persons out of their homes in adjoining houses.

After four hours of fighting, however, the firemen got the blaze under control. It was estimated that the damage would be nearly $150,000. The principal losers were the Wood & Menagh Company, wholesale dealers in hardware and automobile oils. They occupied the building in the basement of which the fire started.

An extension ladder of Truck 2 was run up outside of the Grove Street building, and Fireman Thomas Burke, known as the "Daredevil of the Department," mounted to the top of it with a line of hose. He was directing the stream at the fire when it became necessary to move the ladder to another point where flames were bursting out.

Burke threw himself over the telegraph and telephone wires strung between two poles near which the ladder was and shouted to the men beneath him to take the ladder away. The fireman was on a virtual gridiron and he stayed there for thirty-five minutes. Then a man was sent to relieve him after the ladder had been run up again beneath him. Burke's relief could not stand the heat of the place.

Fireman Gus Martin, realizing that the gasoline tank in the cellar was not shut off, went down to turn it off. Just as he reached for the valve there was an explosion. He was thrown against the wall of the cellar and stunned. Comrades rescued him. Three fingers of his right hand had been blown off, however, and he was taken to the City Hospital.

Between the two sides of the L-shaped building and on the corner were the five buildings used as stores and factories. Several of these took fire, but the firemen managed to put out these blazes before they assumed dangerous proportions.

At 1 o'clock this morning the fire was well under control and Chief Conway consented to some of the families whom he had evicted returning to their homes. Many persons were compelled to spend the night with friends.

TO GATHER REVISION FACTS.

House Committee May Prepare During Recess for Tariff Legislation.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Representative Sereno Payne of New York, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, to-day introduced a resolution authorizing that committee to sit during the recess of Congress, and to gather such information through Government agents or otherwise, as it may see fit, looking toward the preparation of a bill for the revision of the tariff.

Discussing the resolution, Mr. Payne said that its purpose was to enlarge the scope of the powers conferred upon the Ways and Means Committee by a somewhat similar resolution introduced by him last December.

"To-day's resolution," he said, "will enable the committee to carry forward with a free hand the work already undertaken in preparation of a revision of the tariff next year. The committee is now, and for some time past has been, gathering preliminary information from Government officials. The intention is to continue this preliminary work during the remainder of the present session and in the coming recess, but it should be distinctly understood that no act of revisal of the tariff will be undertaken until after the elections of next Fall."

Mr. Payne to-day introduced a bill to amend the existing tariff law governing importations into the Philippine Islands. It bears no relation whatever to the tariff bills to govern importations from the islands into the United States, and applies solely to producing conditions in the Philippines. It is the intention of the leaders in Congress to pass the bill at this session.

CHILD KILLERS IN JAIL.

Parents of Child Victim of Fanatic Arrested After Her Funeral.

EASTON, Penn., April 30.—Robert Bachman of Alliance, near here, who killed 5-year-old Irene May Smith, his niece, several days ago during a religious frenzy, was to-day formally charged with murder. Bachman's wife and Henry E. Smith and his wife, parents of the child, are charged with being accessories. The men are in the Northampton County Jail and the women, who were released yesterday, were rearrested after the funeral of the little girl this afternoon.

Smith to-day had recovered his composure and denounced Bachman, his brother-in-law, in harsh terms. He swore at him from his cell door, and declared he was a fool and not an agent of God. He wants to break the spell Bachman had over him, and declares that when he gets out of jail he will return to the Reformed Church and stick to its teachings for the rest of his life.

Cars Blocked by Woman's Illness.

Mrs. Harriet Hubbell, an old woman living at 416 West 118th Street, fainted on a street car in Broadway just below Times Square yesterday about noon. The conductor and motorman thought that she was dying, and they stopped the car instantly.

There it remained, blocking the line for fully twenty minutes, until an ambulance could be obtained from the New York Hospital.

ACCIDENT BLOCKS BROOKLYN TRAINS

Broken Brake Shoe Ties Up All but One Elevated Line to the Bridge.

MANY WALK IN THE RAIN

One of the worst blocks with which the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has ever had to deal stopped all train traffic across Brooklyn Bridge for 40 minutes in the rush hour last night, and at the same time completely blocked all traffic over the Culver, Bay Ridge, West End, Bath Beach, Sea Beach, Myrtle Avenue, and Ridgewood elevated lines. Not a train passed over any of these lines from 5:32 o'clock until 6:10. After that time traffic was demoralized, and it stayed in this condition for 50 minutes more. Then only did trains begin to run regularly on schedule.

The blockade was caused by the breaking of a shoe on the motor car of a Ridgewood train, which was halted on the elevated structure in Myrtle Avenue. This was across the switch by which Culver, Bay Ridge, West End, Bath Beach, and Sea Beach line trains turn off Myrtle Avenue into Hudson Avenue.

The consequences of this simple accident were far reaching. They were most noticeable at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge and in the Borough Hall Square in Brooklyn. At the bridge a congestion such as the police are seldom called upon to handle resulted from the delay. Thousands of people, on their way to suburban homes, crowded the platforms. The ticket agents continued to sell tickets, and soon the platforms were so thronged with waiting passengers that those on the outside of the platforms were in danger of being pushed on to the tracks.

Capt. Murtha of the bridge squad led twenty policemen to the platforms upstairs on the bridge. They could make no impression on the crowds, and the Captain sent for help. Reserves came from the City Hall Station. They were swallowed up in the crowd and almost lost. Other reserves were called then from the Oak Street Station, and then only were the police able to get the crowds under control.

"There won't be a bridge train for an hour!" shouted the policemen at Capt. Murtha's order, and in this way they managed at last to start the crowds downstairs to the Subway.

Many took trolley cars across the bridge and others walked. The trolley cars, overladen by the unusual traffic, were presently almost as badly tied up as the elevated lines. Then more persons started to walk across the bridge. It was estimated that fully 25,000 persons footed it to Brooklyn through the downpour of rain.

The crowds who took the Subway under the river came to the surface in Borough Square, which they filled presently almost as densely as City Hall Park and the Manhattan end of the bridge. The trolleys which go around the square on a loop without crossing the bridge, were taxed beyond their capacity, and thousands were compelled to wait in the rain while car after car passed them before one came along in which they could find room.

The motorman of the car which caused the tie-up managed after forty minutes to repair the broken shoe so that he could move his train. From then until 7 o'clock trainmen were busy trying to get their trains back on regular running time.

SUICIDE CLAIMS RIGHT TO DIE.

Takes Poison in Park After Writing His Views on Life and Death.

With a letter in his pocket expressing his contempt for life and most people in the world, Francis J. Black took poison yesterday morning soon after daybreak in Central Park. David Kraus, a butcher's assistant, of 103 West 100th Street, on his way to work, saw the man half reclining against the stone wall which borders the West Drive near 102d Street. Kraus thought at first that he was asleep, but finally called Patrolman James P. Cassidy.

Dr. Rubell of the J. Hood Wright Hospital declared that Black had been dead for some time. In his hand was a half-pint flask containing a mixture of port wine and poison, half of which he had drunk. The body was removed to the Morgue.

The dead man was about 28 years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height, and fairly well dressed. In his pockets were $24.65 and eight traveler's checks of the American Express Company, of the value of $20 each. An open letter addressed "To My Friends" and signed "Francis J. Black," was also found. It ran:

"I am tired of life. I suppose 'my Christian friends' will point the finger of scorn at me for my 'impious act,' but let them be charitable in their judgment.

"I was born into this world without being consulted and recognize the right of no man to judge me. There is nothing beautiful in this world, and as I journey through this life I observe nothing but hypocrisy, deceit, and selfishness on every side.

"For the future I have no fear. Spectres and phantoms of other worlds, with their impossible hell, have no place in my brain. Please give the money found on me, amounting to $180, for the benefit of some poor, worthy people. Please give my body for the benefit of Bellevue Medical College."

At the American Express Company's office it was said yesterday that the checks had been issued to Francis J. Black in March by the Denver National Bank. He gave his address at that time as the Great Northern Hotel, Denver. Nothing more was known of him, but it is supposed that he was a Western traveler.

NO SWORD FOR ROCKEFELLER.

Oil Magnate Declines a $500 Antique of the Cromwellian Period.

John D. Rockefeller declined yesterday to receive a sword carried by one of Oliver Cromwell's Lieutenants in the bombardment of the Leigh Parish Church, more than 300 years ago.

The proffered gift to Mr. Rockefeller is from Miss Annie Parry of 4 Vernon Street, Leigh Lane, England. In a letter to him the writer says:

I send this sword for your museum. It was found in the ground 150 years ago near Leigh Parish Church. The sword was lost in the bombardment of Leigh Church by one of Cromwell's men, making it more than 300 years old. I ask $500 for it, which will be of great use to me. If you think I am asking too much I hope you will send what you think it worth. I shall be greatly indebted to you if you will accept it. Yours respectfully, ANNIE PARRY.

As Mr. Rockefeller positively refuses to take the proffered gift, nothing remains for the Government but to sell the trophy to the highest bidder at the next auction. Duty at the rate of 45 per cent. will have to be paid by the successful bidder, while the selling price, or appraised value, will be close to $400. The sword was sent to the seizure room at the Appraiser's Warehouse.

KISSED BURGLAR GOOD-BYE.

Little Girl Thought He Was Her Uncle and Entertained Him.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 30.—Ten-year-old Rosie Barcelli, daughter of Alexander Barcelli, entertained a burglar for two hours to-day and even showed him over the house while he gathered clothing, jewelry, and silverware. Then, when he went away, she kissed him good-bye. She innocently believed the burglar when he told her he was her uncle.

Mr. Barcelli is in Europe. Rosie happened to be alone in the house to-day when there came a rap at the door. She answered it and a man asked her:

"Are you Rosie?"

Rosie nodded.

"Well, Rosie, I am your long lost uncle. Aren't you glad to see me?"

Rosie invited the "uncle" into the house. They sat on the sofa and he told her stories of his home in Italy. Then Rosie showed him through the house, chatting while he made up a bundle of silverware and jewelry.

something done along the lines of the President's programme. Consequently they brought all the pressure they could to bear on Cannon to let some of the measures come up. It was in recognition of this situation that Sereno Payne introduced his bill modifying the injunction procedure, one of the things the President has repeatedly demanded.

The introduction of such a measure by Payne means, of course, that some such bill will be reported and probably passed by the House. It covers only one of the labor points on which the President is insistent. The other, modification of the procedure in contempt trials, is covered in a bill introduced to-day by Mr. Chaney of Indiana. Payne also introduced to-day a resolution covering the only action on the tariff that is to be expected at this session. It provides merely for an investigation during the Summer by the Ways and Means Committee.

Killing Roosevelt's Measures.

It is not only in refusal to enact the measures he demands that Cannon has antagonized Roosevelt all during the session, but in hamstringing certain measures which were bound to go through. Thus, he was behind the attempt to reduce the appropriation for the supervision of railway accounts in the Sundry Civil bill, on which he was beaten narrowly to-day. He is also behind the scheme to cut down the wages of skilled mechanics on the Canal Zone.

Skilled American workmen have been receiving wages in some cases 100 per cent. greater than is paid for similar work in the United States. The Sundry Civil bill proposes to limit this bonus to 25 per cent. That means, in the opinion of the President, that the canal will be delayed for years, if, indeed, it is possible to build it at all, simply because the skilled men necessary to its successful construction cannot be induced to go to the Isthmus for 25 per cent. more than wages here.

The Administration men charge that Cannon, acting through Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee and proceeding on the cry of retrenchment, has been deliberately hamstringing the President's measures at every chance. They cite the action in regard to the Secret Service men who have been employed by other departments than the Treasury. Tawney proposes to cut off absolutely such use of Secret Service men.

That is, say some of the Administration men, when Secretary Root wants to trail an Anarchist he can't because he cannot use the Secret Service. When Attorney General Bonaparte wants to investigate a violation of law in order to bring a case against some corporation or trust, he can't until he manages to develop a secret service of his own, if, indeed, he could ever manage it.

A Deliberate Scheme.

This sort of thing is regarded by the Administration men as part of a deliberate scheme on the part of Cannon and his organization in the House to prevent the carrying out of the Administration policies. Consequently they are not in the least disturbed over the fires that have been built under the Speaker by the tariff revisionists and the free wood pulp men.

They even exult at the increasing evidences of trouble for the Speaker and his followers. They point out that the opposition which is rising every day against Cannon and the reactionaries in the House does not necessarily endanger Republican success in the next Congress, although it does endanger the success of certain Republicans.

It is likely, the Administration men believe, merely to result in the election of other Republicans, and that would not be at all disturbing to them. It is pointed out that that is the real answer to the question which Senator Beveridge asked the Republican steering committee of the Senate the other day when he wanted to know what answer could be made on the stump this Fall to the failure of the Republican Congress to enact legislation demanded by the Republican President.

But it all makes the Democrats very happy. They see in it evidences of certain Democratic victory next Fall, and they are more than ever sure of carrying the next House.

HOUSE MACHINE SMASHED.

Roosevelt Men Raise Appropriation for Publicity Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 30. — President Roosevelt's Republican supporters in the House won one fight for him to-day, with liberal assistance from the Democrats. They got the appropriation to enable the Inter-State Commerce Commission to continue its supervision of the accounts of railways, raised $300,000 to a total of $350,000.

They won in the face of the determined opposition of Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee, who was supported by Payne, Dalzell, and the other thick-and-thin adherents of Speaker Cannon. It was a square stand-up fight between the Roosevelt men and the Cannon men. The vote stood 87 to 78, the Roosevelt men being 14 in the majority. But the Cannon men will have another chance at it when the bill comes up for final passage.

The work to-day was in committee of the whole, where there could be no roll call. When it comes up in the House Tawney will be able to obtain a roll call on this amendment, and Cannon then may be able to muster enough under the whip to win.

The Administration believes that Section 20 of the rate law, which gives the Commerce Commission authority to exact the uniform system of railroad accounting, with supervision of the railroad books by commission examiners, is the most important part of the whole law.

The commission asked for an appropriation of $500,000 to provide for the expert examiners it deemed necessary to a proper execution of this section. Chairman Tawney sent word to the commission that any such sum was out of the question, and asked that the estimate be revised and cut to the irreducible minimum. The commission finally decided that it could get along with $350,000, and not a dollar less. Tawney hooted at that, and when the Sundry Civil bill was reported it carried only $50,000 for this purpose.

Then the President took up the cudgels. He notified his friends in the House that the appropriation had to be $350,000. If it could not be that, he didn't want anything. He told them that to appropriate only $50,000 was to make the law a fraud and a sham and to defeat its real purpose.

If that were the intention of Congress, he said, it would be better either to repeal that section or suspend it. Speaker Cannon was authoritatively informed of the President's attitude on the matter, but paid no attention to it.

Yesterday afternoon, Representative Townsend of Michigan, one of the Roosevelt men in the House, introduced an amendment making this appropriation $350,000. This morning he and Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, one of the stanchest of the Republican insurgents, went to the White House with Representative Sulzer of New York and had a talk with the President about the situation.

Then they went to the House. As soon as the House convened, Townsend led off with a hot speech for his amendment.

He declared that the meagre appropriation recommended by the committee was a fraud pure and simple, a roundabout way to kill by degrees the Hepburn law by rendering it ineffective in its most important part. The section in question he said enabled the commission to find out the doings of the railroads, and to make vastly more effective its work by a complete system of publicity in regard to railroad accounts.

Mr. Tawney spoke forcibly in defense of the committee's recommendation. He said the publicity work of the commission was still in its experimental stage, and that great care should be observed in making appropriations. He was supported in this statement by Mr. Smith of Iowa, who said if a large work were started now, even though it should later prove needless, it would be almost impossible to reduce the appropriation later.

The insurgents were gleeful over the result. The vote was generally regarded in the House as a smashing blow to the House machine.

WOODFORD'S MEETING ENDS IN NOTHING

NOT OF NATIONAL CONCERN

Plea by Seth Low to Support a Great Moral Issue Falls on Deaf Ears—Woodford Still Cheerful.

When Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, head of the National Hughes League and one of the four delegates at large to the Republican National Convention, invited the district delegates to meet him and the other delegates at large with a view to discussing ways and means to further the Hughes boom, he wrote them to come prepared to stay two days. The conference was held yesterday, and lasted about three hours. It broke up after a motion to sustain Gov. Hughes in his attitude on the question of race-track gambling had met a decided frost.

When the conference adjourned, subject to the call of the chair, the conferrees were still wondering just why it had been called. Beyond empowering Gen. Woodford to name "such committees as in his judgment may be desirable to advance the candidacy of Gov. Hughes for the Presidency" it did absolutely nothing. As a matter of fact, it left the Governor just a little worse off than he was before the meeting.

Among the politicians who met to confer at the invitation of the delegates at large—or the three of them who are in this country, Gen. Woodford, Seth Low, and F. R. Hazzard of Syracuse—the men who sincerely desire the nomination of Gov. Hughes could have been counted on the fingers of one hand. Those who desire his extinction as a factor in Republican politics made up the balance. Altogether there were fifty-three delegates and alternates. The only session at which any real business was done was held behind closed doors.

The conference was called to order in the Pompeian Room of the Hotel Astor at 10 o'clock. Only a few of the seventy-four district delegates from this State to the National Convention were then in their seats. On motion of State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff, Gen. Woodford was elected permanent Chairman.

Of the delegates 24 paid no attention to the invitation sent them; 23 attended; 23 sent regrets. Gen. Woodford said that all of the latter had declared themselves in sympathy with the Governor's Presidential aspirations. Among those present were State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff, Congressman Herbert Parsons, Speaker Wadsworth, Senators Agnew, Allds, and Page, William Berri of Brooklyn, Seth Low, Frederick W. Hazzard of Syracuse, George W. Dunn, C. V. Collins, Thomas W. Whittle, Job E. Hedges, ex-Assemblyman Ezra P. Prentice, Postmaster Fred Greiner of Buffalo, James G. Cornell, G. R. Proctor, Alfred E. Vass, S. Koenig, Edward Healy, Taylor H. Burden, William H. Ten Eyck, Samuel Krulewitch, Luther W. Mott, Alexander V. Campbell, James Shea, William H. Douglass, James B. Reynolds, F. C. Williams, and N. J. Gould and Charles Anderson, both alternates at large. Odell had been invited but did not attend.

Woodford Explains the Call.

Gen. Woodford, in explaining the purpose of the conference, said:

"Our State Convention directed us to use all honorable means for the nomination of Gov. Hughes. The political conditions in our country and our State are peculiar. I don't believe that in all my life I have ever seen the Republican Party so seriously divided by different questions as we are in the State of New York to-day.

"We have a Republican Governor with a Republican Legislature, but every State officer below Governor belongs to the Democratic Party. We have a majority in the State Senate, and yet, upon a question on which our Governor feels deeply and keenly, our Senate divides. We have a large majority in the Assembly, and yet measures in which the Governor feels a deep interest fail to pass.

"We are entering upon a Presidential campaign with serious problems before us. We have just passed through a panic, and if we carry the country this Fall after the panic of last Fall it will, I think, be the first time that a party has done it under the same conditions.

"We ought not to act so as to anger any supporters of William H. Taft. We believe that Republican success is best for the welfare of the country, and we should select the best means to achieve victory."

After a motion to go into executive session had been defeated, a committee of three, composed of Seth Low, Alexander R. Campbell, and William H. Douglass, was appointed for the purpose of submitting a programme for discussion. An adjournment was then taken until afternoon, and meanwhile the delegates were entertained at luncheon by Gen. Woodford.

Low's Plan Turned Down.

When the conference reconvened it first listened to reports from Gen. Woodford regarding the work of the National Hughes League. He said that as a result of the league's labors, Gov. Hughes would surely receive at least 110 votes on the first ballot at the National Convention. Ex-Congressman Douglass in reporting on the work of the Committee of Twenty-five appointed by the Republican Club to help along the Hughes boom, said that this body was simply flooding the country with literature which would be certain to set the convention afire for the Governor.

Ex-Mayor Low, after these reports had been received, broached the subject of race-track gambling in a statement in which he declared that there were certain moral issues on which the conference should go on record. Somebody at once moved an executive session so that the matter might be discussed with greater freedom. The motion was carried and reporters were put out.

For about two hours the conference remained in session behind closed doors, but only about half an hour of that time was given to the race-track bills. The rest was devoted to a discussion to determine the form of statement which should be made to the public in order not to injure the Governor. It said that the deadlock between the Governor and the Legislature related entirely to State matters and it was the opinion of those present that the delegates to the National Convention could not intervene with propriety.

In the discussion Mr. Low said he thought the Governor ought to be supported by the delegates on the great moral issue involved and made a speech in support of his plea. It fell on deaf ears. There was no applause. Nobody had anything to say in its favor. Finally, Charles Anderson, the colored alternate at large, who is Collector of Internal Revenue, got the floor, and assailed the suggestion made by Mr. Low in a speech. State Chairman Woodruff followed him, and said that the race-track gambling could not possibly be classed as a National question and that the delegates to the National Convention for that reason ought not to give it any concern.

Senator Page spoke in terms of warmest eulogy about the Governor, but did not say a word about the advisability of the conference taking action to support the Governor in his war on race-track gambling. The opposition to the proposal by that time was so obvious that it was dropped by tacit consent. The conference then adjourned, subject to the call of the chair.

Hasn't Helped Hughes a Bit.

That it has not done anything toward improving the chances of Gov. Hughes for the Presidential nomination or served to make the delegation from this State any more solid for him was the consensus of opinion among those who attended. By many of the delegates who were there it was ridiculed; even the Governor's friends seemed to regard it more or less as a joke.

After the adjournment, Gen. Woodford was asked where the Governor's 110 votes on the first ballot would come from.

"I won't tell you that," the General replied. "I will say this that 66 of the delegates from this State—men who can be relied upon—will vote for the Governor on the first and all other ballots until a nomination is made."

Gen. Woodford denied emphatically that Gov. Hughes had any intention of withdrawing as a candidate for the nomination.

CHEER TAFT AT KNOX DINNER.

If Not the Secretary or Others, Then It's Roosevelt, Says Senator Curtis.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 30.—United States Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania was the guest of honor at the third Republican Club dinner this evening. The dinner was planned as a "Knox boom" affair.

It was a Knox dinner in almost every way, but United States Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, another guest, sought to turn the enthusiasm to Taft by saying his constituents believed in Taft and advising the diners to enthuse for the Secretary of War.

The diners were at a little loss to know why the Taft boom was attempted at a Knox dinner, but they gave Senator Curtis respectful audience and cheered lustily for Taft.

United States Senator Frank O. Briggs and Gov. Fort were also guests. Ex-Gov. E. C. Stokes spoke on "party loyalty," and Job Hedges of New York also spoke.

In Senator Curtis's speech he said: "We of Kansas would like to have you turn your eyes toward her choice, the broad-minded, the able, the efficient Secretary of War, Mr. Taft of Ohio, and if neither he nor the others are to your liking, you may join Senator Bourne in his 'second elective term' movement for our fearless President, Theodore Roosevelt, the man who is strong in all sections, and whose policies have come to stay."

Senator Knox's speech was devoted to a consideration of the trust question. "The Government in Republican hands," he said, "has shown itself master of powerful combinations, but it is my judgment that the great mass of thinking people do not desire the business of the country to be interfered with beyond such regulation as may be necessary to control combinations and correct the tendency toward monopoly."

MAINE'S CHOICE IS TAFT.

But State Convention Sends Its Delegates Uninstructed.

PORTLAND, Me., April 30.—Four Delegates at Large to the Republican National Convention at Chicago were elected at the Republican State Convention held in this city to-day and will go to Chicago without instructions to vote for any one of the Presidential candidates. The convention, however, adopted a resolution declaring "that without attempting to instruct their delegates, the Republicans of Maine in convention assembled declare that William H. Taft of Ohio is their choice for candidate for President of the United States." The Delegates at Large are as follows:

Col. Thomas P. Shaw, Portland; Edward P. Picker, Poland; John F. Hill, Augusta, and Charles J. Dunn, Orono.

The platform adopted reaffirmed belief in Republican Party principles and indorsed the Administration of President Roosevelt.

State Convention Instructs Its Four Delegates for Secretary.

BALTIMORE, April 30.—The State Republican Convention met this afternoon and named as delegates at large to the National Convention Gen. Felix Agnus of The American, William P. Jackson of Wicomico County, and Congressmen Pearre and Mudd.

A resolution was adopted indorsing Secretary of War Taft as a candidate for the Presidency and instructing the delegates elected to use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

Indorsement for Taft in Jersey.

Secretary of War Taft was indorsed for the Presidential nomination by the convention of the Eighth New Jersey Congressional District in Newark last night, although the delegates were not instructed. Dr. Leslie D. Ward, Vice President of the Prudential Insurance Company, was unanimously chosen as a delegate to the State Convention. William F. Allen defeated Col. Henry A. Potter of East Orange for the other place by a vote of 90 to 68.

Mass Meeting Applauds Governor's Speech Against Race Track Gambling.

SCHENECTADY, April 30. — Although suffering considerably from neuralgia, Gov. Hughes came over from Albany to-night in a pouring rain to carry into Schenectady County his campaign against race-track gambling. This county is represented by Senator Wemple, who voted against the Agnew-Hart bills.

Gov. Hughes spoke in the largest opera house in the city, which was crowded to the doors long before his arrival. As he stepped on the platform he was greeted with loud and long applause, coupled with the yell of Union College, of which he is the Honorary Chancellor.

The Governor in his address repeated the arguments he had used in other speeches against race-track gambling.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 30.—The Democratic State Committee met to-day and partisans of William Jennings Bryan, anticipating defeat, withdrew resolutions which they had laid before the committee.

Chairman Van Diver in his speech gave the word for an uninstructed delegation to the National Convention.

JOHNSON RAPS CANNON.

Talks at Ann Arbor Also About the Denver Platform.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 30.—Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota was the guest of one hundred Democrats and Democratic students of the University of Michigan at an informal dinner to-night.

"Even the newspapers must pay tribute to a few for their print paper," he said, "but they have become interested and have petitioned Congress in the name of humanity for relief. But Speaker Cannon and his satellites sit indifferent. The man who works finds conditions growing harder and the man who 'works' the worker gets it easier.

"I want to see a Democratic platform made at Denver that will attract the man who reads, and does not climb aboard because he admires the glit on the band wagon. Then if we lose in the election we will have the satisfaction of knowing it was right, anyway. Expediency never got any party anything.

"If the Democrats present the right platform I promise that be the candidate 'the peerless leader' or a man from the East, West, North, or South, he will have my support, and I will do all I can to elect him."

TAFT STARTS FOR PANAMA.

He Will Try to Settle Some Troubles on the Isthmus.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Secretary Taft left Washington this afternoon for Charleston, S. C., where he will to-morrow embark on the United States cruiser Prairie and proceed to Colon, whither he goes at the suggestion of the President to investigate several important questions connected with the construction of the Panama Canal and the relations between the United States and the Republic of Panama, and also the boundary dispute between Panama and Colombia. The Secretary was accompanied by Richard R. Rogers, general counsel of the Canal Commission; Wendell W. Mischler, his stenographer, and a messenger.

The present expectation is that the Secretary will return to this country possibly as early as May 20, and may land at Pensacola, Fla.

LABOR MAN OFF TO PANAMA.

Samuel B. Donnelly Has a Mission There, but Won't Tell About It.

Samuel B. Donnelly, Secretary of the Board of Arbitration of the Building Trades, will sail for Panama next Monday on a mission the exact nature of which he will not at present disclose.

"I have been requested to go," was about all he would say about the proposed trip yesterday, except that he would combine business with pleasure. He will be away four weeks, and expects to see everything of the labor conditions in the Canal Zone which that period of time will permit.

Asked about the nature of his business and who had requested him to go, Mr. Donnelly replied that it was too early to answer either question definitely. Whether or not his trip there at this time is accidentally coincident with the visit of Secretary Taft is not known. Mr. Donnelly said he might see the Secretary there.

PARTY UNITED, SAYS CONNERS

Chairman Attacks "Injunction Democrat" Traitors and Predicts Success.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 30.—Chairman Conners of the Democratic State Committee this afternoon issued a statement in which he upholds the action taken by the recent Democratic State Convention. "That the State Committee should be appointed by the State Convention, the supreme authority in the party," says the statement, "was rendered necessary by recent decisions of the courts, if power to discipline traitors in the party organization and to prevent its surrender to the Republican Party were to be lodged anywhere in the party between conventions."

Chairman Conners in his statement attacks certain well-known Democrats for "having openly boasted of their treachery to the ticket in the last State campaign, and having said when accused of open treachery that they would rejoice in the chance to repeat their work, and were able by means peculiarly their own to continue posing as representative Democrats and controlling the machinery of the party in important subdivisions of the State.

"Such a condition could not be allowed to continue if Democracy were to survive, and in the opinion of some of the most conservative and able men of the party, the only solution of the problem was to make the State Convention appoint the State Committee.

"I wish to say that the Democracy of the State, despite the wailing and scolding of a handful of traitors and some 'injunction Democrats,' is to-day in better shape than in a political generation, and with strong and representative men as candidates, on a platform standing for economy and rigid honesty in the expenditure of public money and the enforcement of laws without fear or favor, may look forward calmly and confidently to success in the coming election."

"Several men are much disgruntled that they were not on the committee as selected," continues the statement. "I do not hesitate to say that in every case where a choice was made by the convention, different from that made by the locality, the best interests only of the party were consulted, and to predict that in every locality in which such a choice was made the Democratic vote at the coming election will be larger than has been heretofore cast there for the ticket.

"The special interests of several men who have been for some years past using the party machinery for their own personal advancement have been seriously interfered with, but notice has been given, once for all, that the enemies of the Democracy must hereafter fight from outside the party breastworks, and men who are put forward to represent Democratic principles will in the future be only those who are loyal and faithful to the party on election day."

Senator McCarren was at the Hoffman House last night. After reading the statement issued by Chairman Conners he said:

"I have no statement to make regarding this. When I have I will hire a hall and make a speech."

Brooklyn Democrats to Visit Bryan.

The Brooklyn Democratic Club has engaged a special train to take the members and guests to the National Democratic Convention. The members have been notified that the fare to and from Denver will be $60. On the way to the convention the train will be side-tracked at Lincoln, Neb., for several hours to permit the party to visit Mr. Bryan at his home.

PRELATES GATHER AT CATHOLIC CLUB

Reception Given There in Honor of Cardinal Gibbons, Cardinal Logue and Others.

POPE CABLES A BLESSING

The Primate of Ireland Discloses Scenes Attending the Election of Pope Pius X.

The Centennial Programme.

TO-DAY.

Pontifical Votive Mass of the Sacred Heart, Cathedral, 10 A. M. Celebrant, the Right Rev. Charles H. Colton, Bishop of Buffalo. Assistant priest, the Very Rev. Mgr. Thomas Taaffe. Deacon, the Rev. James N. Connolly. Sub-Deacon, the Rev. Thomas F. Myhan. Preacher, the Rev. William O'Brien Pardow, S. J.

SATURDAY.

Cardinal Gibbons, Cardinal Logue, and Archbishop Farley spoke last night at the reception given by the Catholic Club to the visiting priests and prelates, who are here for the centennial celebration of the founding of the Diocese of New York.

The reception was the second social function of the centenary, the first having been a small dinner given by the Papal Countess, Miss Annie Leary, to the two Cardinals, the Archbishop, the Bishop of Cloyne, and a few other dignitaries.

Despite the storm in the evening Central Park South was jammed early with carriages and automobiles of club members and their guests, and by 9 o'clock the richly decorated interior of the club at 120 Central Park South was crowded with laymen and clerics.

On their arrival the Cardinals, Archbishops, and other prelates were escorted to the ballroom on the second floor. On the dais Cardinal Gibbons offered Cardinal Logue the centre chair. Cardinal Logue insisted on giving way to Cardinal Gibbons, and finally the latter took the seat of honor, Cardinal Logue sitting at his right and Archbishop Farley on his left. The Bishop of Cloyne sat at the left of Archbishop Farley, and at the end of the dais sat Archbishop Ireland, who did not wear his cassock and beretta, as did the other Archbishops and prelates.

Edward J. McGuire, President of the club, lost no time in introducing the speakers, for the day had been one to test the endurance of Cardinal Logue. Charles G. Herberman, editor of the Catholic Encyclopedia and Professor of Ancient Languages at the College of the City of New York, made the opening address. He was followed by Archbishop Farley, who introduced Cardinal Logue after congratulating the club on its growth and its achievement of a helping influence in the life of Catholics in the archdiocese.

America His Inspiration.

"I got a solemn promise," said the Cardinal, tucking his silver snuff box into the folds of his crimson mantiletta, "that I would have no speaking to do to-night. But there was a distinguished prelate who exerted himself with the temperance movement and secured 500,000 pledges. I suppose he knew what a broken pledge meant.

"But, with all seriousness, I want to say that it has been one of the greatest pleasures of my life—this visit to America. The close of my life is approaching now. I have but a short time to live, but what I have seen has been an inspiration to me, and it may be that I shall be made the instrument of extending that inspiration to the people in Ireland.

"I was prepared for great material things when I started, but was not prepared for the exhibition of strength of faith that I have seen. If I wanted proof all that I had to do was to open my eyes and look about me at the meeting of the laity held in Carnegie Hall. It was a proof of a flourishing Church.

"This interest of the laity in the clergy speaks well for the future in this country. The bond between clergy and laity seems to be drawn tightly here, and I have been strongly impressed by it. This impression is one of the things that I will carry back to Ireland with me—provided I am allowed to return to Ireland. I don't know whether I'll ever get back. I might get a bit of a place over here and remain for the rest of my little time of life. I think if I could get a real nice quiet little place I'd like to stay.

"Some of you are quite young. You know St. Patrick began to preach when he was 60, and preached for sixty years. You real young men might live to see another centennial in New York.

"If you do you will see the Church of New York and America the greatest in Christendom. You have the vigor of youth here, while we are getting cold in the old countries. I believe that the day will come when the United States will thank the Church for the share it has given in the welfare of the State."

Cardinal Gibbons Speaks.

Cardinal Gibbons followed, and was cheered as he rose from his seat.

"I have seldom spent a happier portion of a week than I have here, watching this celebration," he said. "You know that I represent the mother diocese in this country, Baltimore. New York is her oldest daughter, and she has shared in a wonderful prosperity. The old mother rejoices in it. 'Many daughters have acquired wealthy and glory, but thou, O Baltimore, hath cause to be proud.' I earnestly hope that the mother and daughters will live together in harmony as they have been living.

"Think of the religious liberty we have in this country. No civil functionary would dare enter our cathedral and tell us what to preach and what not to preach. We are as free as the air. Every day I thank the Lord that our lines are laid in pleasant places. We have liberty without license.

"One of the secrets of our success is that our priests are not salaried. I hope that the day will never come when a Government shall pay them, for the Government wants them to preach in return in the way the Government might want. The future of the Church depends on the purity of the priest and the help of the people, and the people can always judge us."

Archbishop Farley announced that the Pope had sent to the Catholics of New York his benediction by cable. The blessing came in response to a cablegram sent to the Holy Father by the Archbishop, in which was an expression of the regard of the American hierarchy for the Head of the Church.

Greeting from the Pope.

The Pope's cablegram follows:

"Rome, April 29, 1908.

"Archbishop Farley, New York:

"The Holy Father thanks you for your telegram expressing good wishes of Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, and priests assembled in New York on the auspicious occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of the erection of the Diocese of New York, and gladly grants to the most eminent, the most reverened, and reverend fathers and faithful of your diocese, so noted for steadfast attachment to Holy Church and to the See of Peter, his apostolic benediction.

"Cardinal MERRY DEL VAL."

After the addresses a collation was served. At the table of the Cardinals and Archbishops were Bishops Browne, Cusack, Morris, Kelly, Donohue, Hendrick, Gabriels, Hoban, Colton, Maes, Tierney, Walsh, and Northrup; Mgrs. McKenna, Abrecht, Murphy, Hayes, Kenney, McCready Lavelle, Mooney, and McGean.

In the company of guests were the three Hendricks—Justice Hendrick of the Supreme Court, Bishop Hendrick of the Phelippine Islands, and Mgr. Hendrick of Albany. Among others present were Bartholomew Moynahan, Justice Vernon M. Davis, Justice Greenbaum, Justice Platzek, Justice Dowling, Justice Fitzgerald, W. Bourke Cockran, Dr. D. J. McMackin, John D. Crimmins, Justice Mayo, Controller Metz, Judge Mulqueen, Rabbi Silverman, and representatives of the professions—Catholic and Protestant.

In the decorations of the club were American flags, two huge electric flags being crossed over the entrance. Inside roses, carnations, arbutus, and vines and palms were used in the greatest profusion. The balusters, running from the main hall to the drawing room and ballroom on the second floor, were covered with vines and lilies. The club provided an escort of honor for the Cardinals and the Archbishops.

TELLS OF VATICAN ELECTION.

Cardinal Logue at Dinner Describes Scenes When Pius Was Chosen.

A glimpse of the doings of the College of Cardinals during the election of Pope Pius X. was given yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor, when Cardinal Logue responded to the toast, "The Holy Father," at a dinner of the alumni of the old Irish Theological Seminary at Maynooth, which has sent many priests to this country.

"In that large collection of Cardinals no one protested so much against the selection of the Patriarch of Venice as he did himself," said the Cardinal. "Had it been a warmer day he might have been chosen sooner than he was. The Pope was overcome and frightened at the burden that he would have to undertake. He was fainting.

"But these Italians," he said, referring to the Italian Cardinals, "generally have conveniences about them. One of them went up to him with a bottle—a smelling bottle, I believe."

When the laughter of the priests had subsided, the voice of the Cardinal took on a serious tone.

"It was a sad sight," he said. "The Cardinal selected to be our Holy Father did not want the office. He had been a faithful priest and hardworking in his Archdiocese. He had worked among the poor and was accustomed to his labors. And to be the Pope he would have only a little bit of a garden to move about in. I've never seen it.

"You know an Irishman was once elected Pope, but he cut away from Rome and ran to the Apennine Mountains and found a cave for himself. He's there yet."

The laughter that greeted him called forth this explanation from the Cardinal:

"It is a historical fact that I am telling you. If I was selected Pope," he added with a faint smile, "I think I would get out of a window and run away.

"It is a dangerous age for the Holy Father of the Church. The Church has its enemies above ground and working like moles under ground. But he can fight them above ground and under ground. I am over here without the permission of the Holy Father, which I should have secured. I was afraid that I wouldn't get it, so I didn't ask it. Maybe I shall see the Holy Father sooner than I shall desire."

Cardinal Logue closed with a priestly tribute of love and fidelity to Pius X., describing him as a saintly man chosen by God for his office.

Before the dinner President Morgan M. Sheedy, head of the Maynooth alumni organization in this country, presented to Cardinal Logue and Bishop Browne of County Cloyne illuminated copies of an address from the priests of Maynooth training now in this country.

Bishop Browne spoke with feeling of old college days, and said he was under the deepest obligations to the United States, for in the building of the Cathedral of Cloyne this country had helped to a great extent.

Archbishop Glennon and the Bishop of Cloyne spoke briefly, after many calls from the assembled priests.

MASSES FOR THE DEPARTED.

Cardinal Logue Attends That at Holy Cross Church.

The first function of the fifth day of the diocesan centennial was a solemn mass of requiem for the souls of departed priests and prelates in the cathedral at 10 o'clock, and a solemn high mass at 11 in Holy Cross Church, which Cardinal Logue attended.

Bishop O'Connor of Newark was the celebrant at the requiem mass. The music was chanted by a large body of seminarians in the chancel choir, the responses being given by a male choir of fifty. The assistant priest was Bishop John J. Swift, the Deacon the Rev. William J. Sinnott, and the Sub-Deacon the Rev. William B. Martin. The preacher was Bishop Cusack, Auxiliary Bishop of the diocese.

Under the hat of Archbishop McCloskey, swung high in the dome of the cathedral above the sanctuary, was spread a great black mantle. Beneath this part of the sanctuary rest the three Archbishops of New York who have passed away—McCloskey, Hughes, and Corrigan. Bishop Cusack's sermon reviewed the lives and works of the holy men who had gone to their fathers.

The mass at Holy Cross Church was the annual mass of the Maynooth Seminary Union of America. Cardinal Logue is himself a graduate of Maynooth, as is Mgr. McCready, rector of the church. Bishop Browne of Cloyne, Cory County, Ireland, was the celebrant of the mass, with the Rev. Morgan J. Sheedy of Altoona, President of the Maynooth Seminary Union, the assistant priest; the Rev. Daniel J. Lavery of St. Louis Deacon, and the Rev. Francis J. O'Hare of Newry, Ireland, the Sub-Deacon.

For Cardinal Logue a throne covered with the Papal colors was built in the sanctuary. His Deacons of Honor were Mgr. McCready, Mgr. O'Keefe, and Mgr. Teeling. There was no sermon.

Falconio May Be Made Cardinal.

ROME, April 30.—The Most Rev. Diomede Falconio, the Apostolic Delegate at Washington, is among those mentioned as likely to be created Cardinals at the Consistory in June.

BILL TO REGULATE MEDICAL EXPERTS

State Medical and Bar Associations Draft a Measure to Do Away with Present Abuses.

WOULD APPOINT EXPERTS

To be Selected by the Court When Their Testimony Is Required—Ex-Judge Cowing Favors New Bill.

The New York State Medical Association, representing the doctors, and the State Bar Association, representing the lawyers, of this State, have been considering what can be done toward regulating the introduction of medical expert testimony, to the end that this form of testimony may not reach such extremes of absurdity as it has in this State within the last year or so. A tentative bill, which may be introduced at the next Legislature, to regulate such testimony, was read last night at the Academy of Medicine.

The New York State Medical Society appointed a special committee to confer with a special committee appointed by the New York State Bar Association with regard to regulating such testimony. The Medical Society's committee drew up the tentative bill.

Dr. John A. Wyeth, President of the New York Academy of Medicine, 17 to 21 West Forty-third Street, read to the audience this bill, which, he said he felt assured, would be accepted by the Bar Association Committee:

At any time in the pendency of any evil proceeding in any court in which any medical or surgical question is likely to be material the court or any Justice thereof may, or at the request of either party shall, appoint from the list made up as hereinafter provided one or more persons learned in the science of medicine and surgery, and of not less than seven years' actual practice, as official experts, who shall investigate the facts of the case and give their opinion upon any such question arising in such proceeding, and make written report thereof to the court.

Section 2. Upon such appointment by the court, or if the parties file an agreement designating an expert for the case, the court shall issue an order for the person so appointed or agreed upon, to be served in the manner provided by law for the service of subpoenas. As soon as may be after service thereof the expert shall make such examination of the case as in his judgment may be necessary and practicable, and shall file his report as above provided.

Section 3. Such report shall be filed in the case, and shall thereupon be open to the inspection of either party, and such report may be read in evidence, and such expert may be called as a witness by either party at the trial.

Section 4—The New York Academy of Medicine, for New York City, and the Medical Society of the State of New York, acting for the State outside of New York City, shall, through committees appointed by these organizations, furnish to the court or courts in various counties, a list of names of members of the medical profession of good standing and of not less than seven years actual practice, recommended by them as competent and expert in medicine and surgery, from which list the court may select such expert or experts as in its judgment may be required.

Such official expert shall be paid out of the treasury of the county a minimum fee of $50 for the examination of, and report on, any case in question, $50 additional for the first day's attendance in court upon the case, and $100 a day thereafter while attendance is required by the court.

The expert witness so listed may be called by any court of the State, and if called from the county of their residence the fee shall be increased to the extent of the extra expense incurred, to which shall be added a reasonable compensation for such extraordinary service and loss of time.

Section 5. Either party at the trial may call other expert witnesses than those appointed or agreed upon, but at his own expense.

Former Judge Cowing said that while he was a practicing lawyer and in his twenty-eight years on the General Sessions bench he had often thought how absurd was the method of getting and using so-called expert testimony.

Judge Cowing said that it was a well-known fact that any side in a case could get just as many experts to testify for it as it was willing to pay for. He thought that the public's confidence in medical expert testimony could not be commanded unless the rules of evidence admitting such testimony were radically changed. He made suggestions for changes along the following lines:

First—Paid experts are now partisan. The jury sees them coaching the counsel, who is responsible for their payment, as to questions to ask opposing experts, and the jury concludes that the testimony is not valuable.

Second—The quality of the expert is not sufficiently looked into and insisted upon now. Lawyers and some Judges think that the greater the number of experts on their side, the stronger ought their case to be.

Third—It is too often the custom now to drag in too many experts on both sides. The jury is confused.

Fourth—It is not fair to allow medical experts to give opinions based upon purely hypothetical questions. They should give opinions on facts within their own knowledge, for ingenious lawyers can fix up hour-long hypothetical questions which would confuse an expert, much less the jury.

Today---THE ARROW SALE

Today there is being held at this store—The Arrow Sale. That is simply a short way of saying that every department throughout the store has contributed at least one special item (in some cases three or four) to constitute an extraordinary one day's sale which has not been equalled in New York in a long while.

The items are too many for us to print here—furthermore, quantities are not large enough, in all instances, to last through the day. So we have compiled the bargains—134 of them—in a little book, which will be handed to you as you enter the store. This booklet describes the goods briefly, tells you the regular selling price, the Arrow Sale price, and in which part of the store the goods are on sale. Cards are displayed throughout the store—with the ⟹ pointing straight at the merchandise on sale.

All the goods are new, fresh and seasonable. The prices, in every case, are at least about one-third to one-half below the regular selling prices.

Come early today Be sure you get the booklet—it contains all the items—as you enter the store. And remember—that in very many instances fifty cents will do the work of a dollar at this store today. This is one of those rare opportunities which no woman can well afford to miss.

This remarkable claim is more remarkable in that it applies to all our productions without regard to price. Nowhere else is there a parallel for this stock of garments.

Each component has been as distinctively tailored as if the purchaser had ordered it beforehand—and paid the extra tax customary for such a privilege.

The Saks Fabrics

As an instance, we point to the handsome novelties presented this season in ready-for-service Suits, among them, the new hair-line stripes in varying widths—some with invisible plaids and in all the approved colorings for Spring.

The Saks Models

Our designers follow the accepted modes only as regards certain conventional details. Beyond this, their creations are distinctly original.
Special attention is directed to the superior modeling of the shoulders and collars of our coats. Always sightly and shape-retaining, this season they are decidedly in advance of all previous efforts.

BERMEL SAILS AWAY; GRESSER IN HIS JOB

HE WAS UNDER SUBPOENA

But Ignored Grand Jury Summons and Went to Europe—Lively Fight Over His Successor.

Joseph Bermel, Borough President of Queens until Wednesday, when he resigned under charges, boarded the steamer Slavonia of the Cunard Line and sailed for Italy a few minutes after noon yesterday. Less than an hour before Mr. Bermel had accepted a subpoena requiring him to appear this morning before the Queens Grand Jury, and had given his word to return to the Grand Jury room in Long Island City at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

At almost the same moment when the steamer bearing Mr. Bermel and his family left its pier, the Aldermen from the Borough of Queens met and chose as Mr. Bermel's successor Lawrence Gresser, Bermel's Commissioner of Public Works. Aldermen Flanagan and Emener, Democrats, and Alderman Carter, Republican, voted for Gresser. Alderman Hogan, Democrat, and Quinn, Independence League, voted for ex-Borough President Joseph Cassidy, who was Gresser's opponent, and who, it had been expected, would win.

The flight of Bermel took the Queens officials by surprise, and District Attorney Darrin and Assistant District Attorney McKennee refused to say what action they might take, if any. The Grand Jury, before which Bermel had appeared in the morning, met again in the afternoon, and when the jury adjourned it was rumored that indictments had been found which might result in the prompt return of Mr. Bermel.

The flight of the ex-Borough President was accomplished by the narrowest of margins. Had it not been that the Slavonia was delayed for nearly seven minutes Mr. Bermel would have been compelled to stay in the city. The Slavonia was to have sailed at noon. The crowd on board bidding farewell to a party of forty priests and thirty-five laymen, who are going to Rome to attend the fiftieth anniversary of the Pope's ordination, delayed the sailing, and it was 12:05 o'clock before the gangplanks were finally drawn in.

Mr. Bermel reached the pier in a large automobile at 12:02 o'clock. He was accompanied by his family, and half a dozen other autos followed bearing his friends. The ex-Borough President's family went on board, but Mr. Bermel lingered at the foot of the gangplank to bid adieus. About fifty politicians from Brooklyn were present.

As he shook hands with his friends Mr. Bermel's eyes filled with tears. He dashed them away and tried to smile as one after another of those who had come to see him off wished him good luck. But in a moment he was weeping frankly. He seemed in no hurry to board the boat, but his friends evidently feared that papers of some sort might be served on him and they tried to hurry him on board. The tension caused by his delay proved too much for one friend finally, and he fairly pushed Bermel up the gangplank as he pleaded:

With a final wave of his hand the ex-Borough President went up the plank and a few minutes later the steamer moved slowly away from her dock.

"I have nothing to say except to leave good luck for my friends and enemies alike," was Bermel's parting statement to newspaper men.

Appeared Before Grand Jury.

In order to catch the steamer Mr. Bermel had gone directly to the pier from the Grand Jury room in Long Island City. His appearance there was caused by William S. Pettit, the lawyer who filed charges against him with Gov. Hughes. Bermel's intention of sailing for Europe was known in Long Island City, and it was rumored on Wednesday night that Mr. Pettit would serve a warrant on him as he boarded the vessel, unless he was subpoenaed by the Grand Jury. Francis H. Van Vechten, counsel for Mr. Bermel, arranged with Pettit not to serve the warrant on his promise to produce Bermel before the Grand Jury yesterday. Pettit agreed that Mr. Bermel should appear at 12 o'clock, but learning afterward that the Slavonia, on which Bermel was to sail, left at that time, he informed Mr. Van Vechten that unless Bermel was in the Grand Jury room at 10 o'clock he should serve the warrant.

Bermel, looking pale and worn, appeared in the Court House at 9:45 o'clock. The Grand Jury was not in session, and he was compelled to wait. At 10:35 o'clock he entered the Grand Jury room and was there for half an hour. When he came out Assistant District Attorney McKennee was with him and stood talking with him in the corridor, when Lieut. Butler of the District Attorney's office approached the couple.

"Mr. Butler will serve you with a subpoena," said the Assistant District Attorney, and Mr. Bermel turned pale. He hesitated and then accepted the paper. Then he again entered the Grand Jury room.

"I'll be back at 2 o'clock," was all he would say when he came out an instant later, and he hurried to the street and into the city automobile which he used as Borough President. News of Bermel's sailing had not reached Long Island City when the Grand Jury reconvened at 2 o'clock, and that body awaited the former Borough President for some time.

Bermel's Successor Elected.

In the City Hall here, meantime, the election of Mr. Bermel's successor was occasioning a lively time. Mayor McClellan issued the call on Wednesday for the election at noon yesterday, and at that time the Aldermanic Chamber was crowded with Queens officials, citizens, and Aldermen.

Alderman Flanagan was missing when Mayor McClellan called the meeting to order. Alderman Carter was plainly troubled, and he tried several times to have the election adjourned. Then Flanagan came in and dropped into his seat. Carter sank back with a sigh of relief.

Mayor McClellan had Bermel's resignation read, and then announced that the election would be proceeded with. Alderman Quinn said he was sorry he could not nominate an Independence League man, but he would name a good Democrat, and he put Cassidy in nomination. Hogan seconded the nomination, and then Flanagan arose. He talked for nearly a quarter of an hour, and at last proposed Gresser, remarking:

"I nominate a man as poor as I am, and I hope my friends who know I'm on the level, will stay my friends after my action to-day."

Gresser's friends in the gallery applauded his name, and Alderman Carter moved that the nominations be closed. Then the vote was taken, and there was loud cheering when Flanagan made the third vote for Gresser, insuring his election. The cheering continued while Flanagan escorted Gresser to the rostrum to be sworn in as Borough President.

There were many Cassidy men in the crowd, however, and feeling over the election ran high. As Alderman Flanagan pushed his way through the crowd at the rear of the chamber, an excited Cassidyite yelled:

"Lemme at him. Lemme at him."

He was pulled out of the way by friends, but a moment later in the hall the same man attacked Alderman Emener. Several blows were struck, but none landed before the police hustled the Alderman's assailant out into City Hall Park. The attack on him had evidently shaken Flanagan's nerve, for he got a policeman to escort him to a Subway train.

On the subject of the protection of court and trust funds, Controller Glynn said:

By placing all these funds under the supervision of the Chamberlain and County Treasurers greater care and wider supervision will be exercised in their management.

Another of the series of banking reform bills recommended by Supt. Clark Williams of the State Banking Department was placed on the statute books to-day when Gov. Hughes signed the bill requiring branch offices of trust companies to secure the consent of the Superintendent to do business and also requiring $100,000 capital in addition to the capital of the main institution required under law.

ANONYMOUS LETTERS WRITTEN BY LAWYER

F. B. Whitney, Vice President of Lake Submarine Company, Made Lobbying Charges.

ELECTRIC BOAT CO. ATTACK

Writer Is Ill in Hospital—Fictitiously Signed Letters Submitted by Lilley Are Not Taken as Evidence.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Frederick Brown Whitney, Vice President of the Lake Submarine Company, admitted to-day that he was the author of the anonymous letters of Feb. 13 and Feb. 15 to the representative of The Detroit Free Press and State Senator Frank Edinborough of Michigan, which have figured so prominently in the submarine investigation.

The inquiry into the legislative methods employed by the Electric Boat Company directed by the House of Representatives under a resolution introduced Feb. 20 last by Representative George L. Lilley of Connecticut, is ended so far as open sessions of the special House Committee which has been conducting it are concerned. The closing hours of the case were dramatic.

The admission of Mr. Whitney, an attorney at law, was made in the form of an affidavit which was read by his counsel, ex-United States Senator Thurston of Nebraska. Mr. Thurston stated that Mr. Whitney was ill in the Garfield Hospital, this city, and that it would be impossible for him to appear before the committee.

In the affidavit Mr. Whitney stated that from 1901 to 1904 he was Clerk to the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives; that shortly thereafter he became Second Vice President of the Lake Torpedo Boat Company, which position he retained until May 19, 1906; that he is now Vice President of the Lake Submarine Company, an independent organization. The reasons for writing the annoymous letters were given by Mr. Whitney as follows:

Aimed at Electric Boat Company.

"That of his own initiation he undertook what appeared to him at the time to be not improper methods to have brought to the attention of Congress the methods which he believed had been pursued by the Electric Boat Company in the endeavor to obtain through Congressional action what might be termed exclusive legislation, which would shut out competition and prevent the Lake Torpedo Boat Company from competing in the United States for submarine torpedo boat construction."

Mr. Whitney, in his affidavit, says that when he sent these anonymous communications he had good reason to believe that a resolution would be introduced in the House of Representatives for an investigation of the methods of the Electric Boat Company and its predecessor, the Holland Boat Company. He further says that he sent newspaper clippings to some members of the Naval Committee, and may have sent to Representative Lilley before Feb. 20, 1908, the date of the introduction of Mr. Lilley's resolution of inquiry, newspaper clippings including the figures of alleged excessive cost of submarines, namely $1,476,296.60, which he attempted to compile from the testimony of Admiral Bowles given before the Naval Committee of the House in 1902. In conclusion the affidavit states that Mr. Whitney has no personal knowledge from which he could give any evidence to sustain any of the charges of Representative Lilley.

Other Fictitiously Signed Letters.

In announcing the close of the open sessions of the committee, Chairman Boutell said that the question of the production of the letters of Representative Lilley and the books of the two submarine boat companies will be determined by the committee after a careful examination and analysis of the evidence upon which the demand for the documents was based.

"There still remain," continued Mr. Boutell, "a few fictitiously signed letters handed in by Mr. Lilley, a few anonymous, and one or two affidavits, which have not been made the basis of any evidence taken by this committee. On careful examination it appears that these suggestions relate either to dead members of the House of Representatives, who died in full honor and respect of their fellow men, or else these matters relate entirely to remote Congresses and raise questions with which this committee has no power to deal."

The report of the committee probably will not be presented to the House for some time.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 30.—Capt. C. D. Wallace, the only official of the Lake Torpedo Boat Company here, to-night, had this to say:

"Mr. Whitney never wrote the anonymous letters by any authorization of the Lake Company. He was in the employ of Lake Company."

11 SHOTS TO KILL A HORSE.

Policeman's Bad Marksmanship Moves Broadway Crowd to Anger.

"Old Dick," a truck horse, which for twenty years or more had been hauling baggage about the streets of New York, was put to death yesterday at Broadway and Fiftieth Street. A sympathetic crowd saw him put out of his suffering. His master stood in the rain, crying like a child. It took eleven bullets to kill the horse. The policeman who did most of the shooting either aimed carelessly or did not know where to find Dick's brain.

Dick was owned by William Henry, a negro, who keeps an express stand at Fifty-third Street and Broadway. The horse was thirty years old. Most of his usefulness was past, but he could still jog along with a light load. Yesterday afternoon his load was lighter than usual, but as Dick neared the express stand he stumbled and fell in a heap. Two negroes tried to help him to his feet, but Dick only sprawled around on the slippery street and tossed his head in protest.

A man who said he was a veterinary arrived and told the negroes that Dick would have to be shot as he was unable to stand. The man produced a revolver and began to shoot at Dick. He had shot three times when Policeman Kerrigan of the Traffic Squad appeared. Then he began to shoot. The policeman sent eight bullets into Dick's skull, pausing between each shot to see if it was effective.

When the policeman was asked why he had not notified the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of the case, he said that it would have taken too long. There were many protests from the crowd over the needless suffering imposed upon the horse.

15 YEARS FOR PERJURY.

Bruno Cardea Got This Sentence on Top of 5 Years for Attempted Murder.

Bruno Cardea, a young Italian, who, after he had served one year of a five-year sentence for stabbing Luigi Favata was brought down from Sing Sing last week to be tried for perjuring himself in the trial of Pietro Giannone, now serving a twenty-four-year sentence for hiring Cardea to attempt the murder, was convicted yesterday in General Sessions. Judge Rosalsky instantly sentenced him to another term of fifteen years, which will begin when the first sentence is ended.

On Dec. 11, 1907, Favata, who is a photographer of 71 Mulberry Street, had gone with his wife to the house of Giannone, also a photographer, in Oliver Street. On their return Cardea crept up silently and plunged a knife into Favata's abdomen.

After Cardea's conviction for this crime he confessed to Detective Joseph Russo that Giannone and another man had made a compact with him to kill Favata. The perjury was in his retraction of this statement.

NO CURRENCY PROGRESS.

House Committee Refuses to Take Up the New Vreeland Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The House Committee on Banking and Currency had a brief meeting to-day, but declined to proceed for the purpose of taking up the new Vreeland Currency bill. The vote for adjournment stood 12 to 3, the negative votes being cast by Messrs. Burton, Weeks, and McKinney.

The negative vote is supposed to represent the strength of the new bill, and it is inferred that that measure will be tabled, as was the first Vreeland bill, if it ever reaches a vote in committee.

GARFIELD DEFIES JEFF DAVIS.

Refuses His Request for Information Regarding Indian Records.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Before the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs to-day Secretary Garfield declined to furnish a statement made to him by a Mr. Rosenwinkle in which it is said the latter charged that some of the Judges of the citizenship court of Indian Territory and some United States officials had been bribed in connection with the Choctaw and Chickasaw citizenship proceedings.

The demand for the production of this statement was made by Senator Jeff Davis, and when the Secretary refused to produce it on the ground that it was unsubstantiated, Mr. Davis threatened to air the subject on the floor of the Senate.

MUST BORROW $250,000,000.

Financial Outlook of German Empire for Next Five Years Rather Depressing

BERLIN, April 30.—That the Imperial Government must borrow $250,000,000 during the next five years was the substance of a communication to-day to the Appropriations Committee of the Reichstag.

Herr Sydow, Secretary of the Treasury, said he was much shocked by the prospect of having to borrow $250,000,000, and he declared that the empire must abandon its borrowing policy.

The committee adopted Herr Paasche's proposal that the Government present an amortization scheme.

Swiss Guides Find In Ice Body of Man Lost 21 Years Ago.

BERNE, April 30.—While exploring the Monte Rosa Glacier this afternoon a party of guides discovered in an ice crevasse a body which they cut out of the ice and brought to town.

Later the body was identified as a guide named Naghl, who fell into a crevasse in the Summer of 1887 while conducting a party over the glacier.

The body was well preserved.

The envelope will be forwarded to Paris unopened.

The application for this document was made on behalf of the police authorities of Paris, where Lemoine is under bail on a charge of defrauding Sir Julius Wernher of the De Beers Diamond Company by means of his diamond-making scheme.

He will attend the Convention of Governors of the States and Territories, and consult with President Roosevelt concerning the appointment of a native member of the Executive Council, and in the matter of the Catholic Church property cases.

NEW CANAL FOR NEW JERSEY.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the Secretary of State of New Jersey incorporating the Hudson and Passaic Canal Company. The object of the company is to build a tidewater canal 250 feet in width from the Passaic to the Hudson River at Edgewater.

This project has been under consideration for six years, but the construction of the canal has been impossible because some years ago a law was passed providing that no canals should thereafter be built in New Jersey longer than three miles nor wider than 100 feet. The Legislature which has just adjourned passed certain amendments to the Canal act, which have been approved by Gov. Fort, and which permit the building of canals of greater length than three miles and of the width of 250 feet.

The proposed canal is about eight miles in length and is in a direct line from the Passaic River to the Hudson River.

The incorporators are Lemuel William Serrell, Plainfield; Rear Admiral John J. Read, U. S. N., Mount Holly; John J. O'Leary, Passaic, N. J.; Charles H. Bickel, John Arbuckle & Co., Arthur V. BRINGS RARE BIRDS TO THE BRONX ZOO

HEARD WAR TALK THERE

But the Primitive Natives Treated Him and His Wife Courteously and Sold Birds for Beads.

C. William Beebee, the curator of ornithology of the Zoological Park, in the Bronx, and his wife returned yesterday from a successful expedition along the coast of Venezuela and the shores of the Orinoco Delta, where they went for the purpose of studying birds and animals unknown in this country.

Mr. Beebee, while not making the trip to collect specimens for the Zoological Park, did bring with him about fifty birds and animals which are new to the present collection of the park.

Mr. and Mrs. Beebee were much of the time in the very heart of the pitch tar section of that country, about which the United States and President Castro are at odds, and the peaceful ornithologist heard much talk of war. He says, however, that they were treated with great courtesy and consideration.

"When we left New York," said Mr. Beebee, "it was our intention to spend most of our time along the coast of British Guiana, but when we reached Trinidad we found that many conditions, including the sailing dates of vessels, made it impracticable for us to carry out the original programme. I then chartered a twenty-ton schooner, hired a cook, and set out for the Venezuelan coast.

"From that time on we spent much of the time cruising along the coast, seeing many birds unknown in this country with every possible advantage of studying their habits. The territory traversed by us is sparsely settled, with no large cities, and the men and women scantily clad, living in the most primitive manner. We found the men, however, highly civilized in this respect, at least, that they are most considerate of women, and could give a lesson to the men of this country.

"As to the birds brought home with me, they were all bought. We gave in exchange various articles the natives wanted. For some of them I paid in beads.

"I brought back about twenty tanagers, some ducks, a scarlet ibis, demi-fly catchers, two porcupines—altogether about fifty birds and animals, few of which have any common name, and none of which was in the Park collection."

BINGHAM TELLS OF POLICE NEEDS

Says a Few Alterations in the Law Would Give Us Best Force in World.

WANTS SKILLED DETECTIVES

Also More Stringent Regulations Governing Pawnbrokers and the Sale of Weapons—800 More Men Needed.

A few alterations in the law, especially with regard to pawnbrokers and dealers in weapons, and the expenditure of a little more money, are the measures which Commissioner Bingham, in an article in the current number of The North American Review lays down as necessary to provide New York with the best police force in the world. He declares that the "system," as it once existed is considerably weakened, but recommends in order that the police may realize the advantage of behaving honestly that the term of office of the Commissioner should be increased and the election machinery be taken altogether out of the hands of the police.

With regard to the number of patrolmen, Mr. Bingham points out that there are within the limits of the city not only the most densely populated districts but also precincts in which houses are two miles apart and night posts are 10, 12, and 14 miles long. In New York there is a patrolman to 547 of the inhabitants, while there is one to 485 of the residents of Washington, one to 511 Philadelphians, and one to 509 Bostonians. London has one policeman to 496 inhabitants, Dublin has one to 330, and Berlin one to 340.

The proportion which the Commissioner lays down as the ideal for New York is one patrolman to 400 inhabitants, and he declares that for this an immediate increase of the force by 800 men is essential. He declares he asked the Aldermen two years ago for an increase of 2,000 men and says these numbers were scaled down. He has only obtained in response to his official requests 1,400 men, and he declares that until the whole addition asked for is granted he cannot guarantee proper protection for life and property. The 800 men he needs would cost $800,000 a year.

The Commissioner deals also at length with the state of the Detective Bureau. "It is a fact also," he says, "for which the present system is to blame, that to tell the honest truth there is at present no great detective in the employ of New York City. The old rule-of-thumb methods still prevail. The police force itself, even the best men, would not recognize a high-grade, first-class real 'sleuth' if he came down the street headed by a brass band. To provide New York with one or two—possibly six—such real detectives would in results astonish and please her citizens as much as it would paralyze the crooks and crooked politicians."

Such men the Commissioner declares are rare, and cannot be made from the material available under the present system, but if he were allowed to have, at a cost of $100,000 a year, a civilian detective force, known personally only to two or three officials, he could obtain them."

With regard to pawnbrokers, junk dealers, and dealers in second-hand goods, Commissioner Bingham asks legislation to compel them to furnish the police daily with a written report of business transacted, giving the name and address of the person pawning articles, with a general description of personal appearance, a detailed description of the articles pawned, the hour that the transaction occurred, the amount loaned, the number and description of the pawn ticket, and any other information that may be of value in tracing lost property.

Similar regulations should be laid down by law for the sale of weapons, says the Commissioner. He quotes in defense of these proposals the fact that the police in a recent raid on a pawnbroker, who was suspected of being a "fence," found in his shop the proceeds of no less than six separate burglaries.

Coroners do not meet with the approbation of Mr. Bingham, and he would like to see them superseded by police surgeons.

Once more Commissioner Bingham says that the head of the Police Department should have a long term and should be subject to dismissal by the Governor or Mayor only upon the publication of the reasons. He thinks that ten years is as long as one man would be able under present conditions to bear the strain. The present short-term system, he says, "leaves the men in doubt as to whether they had better obey the Commissioner or whether they can take the chance with impunity of disobeying him and throwing obstacles in his way."

After two years and four months in Mulberry Street, Commissioner Bingham says: "The 'system' as it once existed is considerably weakened. No policeman of whatever rank can to-day make good a promise to a lawbreaker of immunity from police interference, no matter what price he may pay, nor is there danger that a member of the force will be punished by his immediate superiors for cooperating in the apprehension of lawbreakers, if he has the courage to appeal to the Commissioner or his deputies. As for political leaders coming to Headquarters to obtain the transfer of policemen as punishment or reward—that has been done away with altogether."

POLICE CLASS IN ITALIAN.

Half a Dozen of the Force Ready to Talk the Language Now.

There were five of them, and they might have been Italian opera singers from the mellifluous way in which the Italian words flowed from their lips.

They were not exactly the type of opera singers, to be sure. They had not the girth or fierce mustachios or haughty mien. There was one tall chap—all were more or less lean—their heights ranging from the tallest down, in steps, and two of them anyway would have been marked by their complexions as bona fide Italians until it came out that their names were Kelly, O'Brian, McCormack, Upton, and the fifth, Ditsch, because his paternal ancestors were German. A sixth member of the class was absent.

They were members of the detective force of the city taking the last lesson in a course of Italian at the Berlitz School of Languages. It was an experimental course given by the school after consultation with Police Commissioner Bingham and Deputy Commissioner Woods, which has been carried on for three months with considerable success. The Prefect of Police in Paris made arrangements for such a course for his men last year, and a large number of the Paris police took lessons in English, German, and Italian. Nine men commenced with the New York class; three dropped out for various reasons, but the remaining six have made excellent progress. The men can already carry on an ordinary conversation in Italian. Yesterday, with their professor, Ferdinando Maggioli, they talked on all sorts of subjects, from the rain to Brooklyn trolley cars—practical every-day subjects, and they spoke with fluency.

"I never thought Irishmen could speak Italian as well as that," said the Italian Consul, who was the day's guest of honor, in an aside, and the O'Brians and Kellys enjoyed the joke hugely when it was repeated to them.

"Mi faccia una questo," (ask me a question,) said Prof. Maggioli to Francis J. Upton, who was at one end of the row of police students.

"Signor Professore, mi dia dieci soldi," (give me 10 cents,) returned Upton quickly.

"No, no," returned the "Professore," "questo, non è una demanda," (a question, not a demand.)

Any one hearing Upton spinning out long sentences in Italian and introducing the word "Tenderloin" with great gusto at the end might have thought that the officer was relating previous experiences in his professional career, but he was not. Policeman O'Brian in reply to a question from the professor had said that he liked "porco mecco," (pork,) whereupon Upton announced that his favorite meat was "bistecca," (beef,) adding, with an accent of blissful reminiscence "and tenderloin."

"Now, don't hesitate to talk," said General Manager V. Harrison Berlitz to the men at the close of the lesson. "Whenever you meet an Italian talk to him, and if you don't meet one talk among yourselves."

The men said later that they thought the lessons would prove a great help to them.

"You see," said one of the men, "if there's a shooting on the street we can't make out what it's all about unless we can talk with the men."

Here is the New York Italian-speaking detective force: Bernard A. Ditsch, Edward F. Kelly, George McCormack, Francis J. Upton, H. Y. Horton, and C. C. O'Brian.

Bingham Denies Transfer Rumor.

In speaking of the transfers of Captains and Lieutenants which were made on Monday, Commissioner Bingham said yesterday morning:

"I understand that all kinds of rumors are afloat concerning the recent transfers, and that they were made at the request of gamblers and politicians. This is not so, for they were made for police reasons."

IGNORANT OF CAMPAIGN GIFTS

Vreeland Knew Nothing of Metropolitan's Finances, He Testifies.

H. H. Vreeland was on the stand again yesterday morning in the hearing of the suit of Emanuel Weil and Minnie Weiller against certain Directors of the New York City Street Railway Company before Justice Young in the Eleventh District Municipal Court. Mr. Vreeland was cross-examined by John B. Stanchfield for the defense. When questioned about campaign contributions Mr. Vreeland said that if the Metropolitan made such gifts he knew nothing about it.

"Are there any vouchers or any records of the company to show that the late Mr. Whitney made any contributions to any political organization?" asked Mr. Stanchfield.

"If there are I am not aware of it," was the reply.

Mr. Vreeland said that he knew nothing about the financial side of the company, and when asked about the correctness of the annual reports he said:

"It took several weeks of careful auditing to prepare the reports, and I could not be expected to tell."

The witness had never made any attempts, he said, to find out whether the statements in the reports were correct.

The case will go on this morning.

SPEEDING THE RECOUNT FIGHT

Testimony of Patrolmen Who Guarded Ballots Expected to End To-day.

The examination of the policemen, who guarded the ballot boxes used in the 1905 city election continued all day in the Hearst-McClellan recount trial yesterday. It is expected that by adjournment to-day all of the patrolmen will have been examined. The testimony yesterday corroborated the evidence of the policemen who were previously on the stand. They all swore the boxes were zealously guarded while in the care of the police.

On Monday, it is expected the examination of Police Inspectors and Captains will begin. Practically all men of these grades have been subpoenaed, it was said yesterday.

TO ASK GRAND JURORS ABOUT PERKINS CASE

Members of March, 1906, Jury Subpoenaed to Tell To-day How Jerome Handled It.

THE $40,000 NYLIC FUND

District Attorney Didn't Present It Personally to Jury — Thought the Transaction Lawful.

For a short time yesterday District Attorney Jerome took the stand in the inquiry before Commissioner Richard L. Hand into the charges brought against him by the King Committee of Metropolitan Street Railway stockholders. He was questioned by Franklin Pierce, attorney for the King Committee, as to his attitude before the Grand Jury in 1906 on the forty-thousand-dollar Nylic payment of New York Life money, which constitutes the ground for one of the charges on which the removal of the District Attorney is sought. Mr. Jerome testified that he had never personally brought the Nylic payment to the attention of the Grand Jury, but believed that his assistants, Mr. Kresel and Mr. Smyth, spent some time on it in the Grand Jury room.

Mr. Pierce had on hand yesterday six members of the Grand Jury which sat in March, 1906. Their testimony was not required yesterday, but they will be called to the witness stand this morning to tell about the attitude in the Grand Jury room of the District Attorney on the subject of the New York Life campaign contribution of 1904. It was the March (1906) Grand Jury which was brought before Judge O'Sullivan for instructions before Mr. Jerome would let it pass upon the Perkins case. It is understood that some of the jurors did not coincide with Mr. Jerome's views on the subject.

One of the Bagg Vouchers Missing.

At the beginning of the hearing yesterday Mr. Pierce reported that he had missed over night one of the Metropolitan Street Railway vouchers contained in the trunk which George R. Bagg had in his possession at the time of the Seabury investigation into jury fixing, when Bagg was employed by both the District Attorney and the Metropolitan Street Railway. Mr. Pierce asked Mr. Jerome if he knew where it was, and Mr. Jerome said he did not.

The missing voucher, which showed a payment of $10, presumably for entertainment by Ambrose F. McCabe, while in the company of three Justices of the City Court, had never been introduced in evidence, as Mr. Pierce explained that he did not personally wish to be responsible for dragging in the names of the three Judges supposed to have been entertained by McCabe.

Mr. Pierce had Mr. Jerome on the stand in regard to the Nylic payment, which represented the profits accruing to the New York Life by the use of $980,000 of its money in a loan to the Mexican Central Railroad, financed by the banking firm of Kidder, Peabody, & Co. of Boston. The transaction was made by Mr. Perkins and Treasurer Randolph on behalf of the New York Life, so far as the bankers understood, but when the check for profits came in, it was turned over to Mr. Perkins, who deposited it in his personal account to the credit of Nylic.

Mr. Jerome explained to Commissioner Hand that the Nylic fund was a very complicated matter; that it was designed to encourage the company's agents in getting business and was within the investment control of Mr. Perkins.

"Did you ever bring this matter to the attention of the Grand Jury?" asked Mr. Pierce.

"Personally no; but I examined it, and Mr. Kresel and Mr. Smyth, I believe, went to the Grand Jury with it and spent considerable time upon it."

Thought Nylic Payment Lawful.

Referring to the fact that Mr. Jerome sought at the beginning of his insurance investigation, the services of Matthew C. Fleming, the assistant of Mr. Hughes in the Armstrong investigation, Mr. Pierce asked Mr. Jerome if Mr. Fleming did not think the $40,000 Nylic payment an indictable offense.

"No," said Mr. Jerome, "I had a conference with Mr. Fleming and was glad of his services. We talked over the matter of the Nylic fund and its various aspects, but at no time did we agree that a just indictment could be reached."

Mr. Pierce submitted his evidence on the sixth charge, which related to the matter of syndicates in the Mutual Life and Equitable Life, by means of memoranda, referring to the testimony taken before the Armstrong Committee. The most important of these syndicates was one in the Equitable, in the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy purchase money syndicate, in which a large participation was taken on behalf of the society by George H. Squire, then the financial manager for J. P. Morgan & Co., the syndicate managers. All of the money required for the subscription was furnished by the Equitable Life, and when the repayment was made, followed by a check representing the profits on the participation, that too was addressed to the Equitable and in its favor, just as the check was drawn to the New York Life in the $40,000 Nylic transaction.

It appeared from the testimony, however, that part of the participation was taken in the interest of a syndicate of former Equitable Directors, and accordingly Mr. Squire deposited the check representing profits and drew against it in favor of the individual syndicators, being careful, however, to charge against the share of each one interest on the money "advanced" for his account by the society in making payments on its subschiption.

The Mutual syndicate of most importance was that in the stock of the Lawyers Mortgage Company, which was originally offered to President McCurdy on behalf of the Mutual Life, rejected by him, and subsequently found its way into the hands of members of the McCurdy inner circle.

Mr. Jerome found nothing criminal in either thansaction.

"Criminal Conspiracy" Item Out.

Commissioner Hand announced yesterday that he would not take testimony on the eighth charge, which relates to the accusation of William N. Amory, made in 1903, to the effect that the formation of the Metropolitan Securities Company constituted a criminal conspiracy.

The remainder of the session was spent in introducing exhibits from the Jackson suit against the New York City Railway, as bearing on the ninth, tenth, and eleventh charges, all of which have to do with Metropolitan Street Railway matters.

The ninth charge relates to the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries Railway transaction; the tenth charge alleges larceny in connection with a discount of $4,500,000 on the issue of $15,000,000 ten-year 3 per cent. debenture notes of the Interurban Railway in 1902 and 1903; the eleventh charge alleges falsification of reports for the reason, among other things, that this $4,500,000 discount was put in as an asset entitled "Construction and Equipment."

In the Attorney General's suit it was admitted, on behalf of the company, that for the purpose of determining solvency this item must be stricken out.

The investigation will be continued to-day.

NO-TIP BARBER SHOP SOON STARVED OUT

New York Refused to Patronize the Place Until the Ban Was Removed.

NOW ALL HANDS ARE HAPPY

Barbers Merry and Chiropodist Ditto, While the Manicurists Smile and Harvest the Coins.

Vincent and Joseph Martire, father and son, have buried a long-nourished ambition to operate a successful no-tip barber shop. They started it all right and put $30,000 into an establishment of the first order. They ran it, with more and more loss every month, for a little over a year. New York wouldn't have it. And so now the Martires say that customers may tip the barbers as much as they wish, and as many times as they please. Since the announcement trade has picked up remarkably in the shop at 1,418 Broadway, between Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Streets.

"It's odd," said Joseph yesterday at the shop. "My father has had the Marlborough Hotel barber shop for twenty-five years. We decided to make a success of a new sort of shop. It wasn't to be a cheap-looking place; it was to be of the finest to the end that no one need imagine that he was patronizing a cheap place because he didn't have to tip the workmen who attended to his wants.

"We decided that it wouldn't do to rent a basement place, nor any place up any stairs. We took this big store here on the ground floor with plenty of ventilation and opening out on the street. I needn't tell you of the money that was spent in fixing the place up. Look around you.

"Well, we started in with a swing in March, 1907. The average salary of a barber under the tipping system is $12 or $13. We gave our men $17 a week, with a 25 per cent. commission on all over $32 each of them brought in during the week. Under that arrangement, when business was good, they could have made $25 a week.

"We advertised, and the shop was in a conspicuous place. People couldn't help knowing about it. And how did it go?

"A man usually pays for a shave 15 cents and a 10-cent tip; 35 cents for a hair cut with a 10 or 15 cent tip, and on down the line. We started in with these prices: Shave, 20 cents; hair cut, 35 cents; massage, 35 cents. Under that schedule the customer was saving from 20 to 40 per cent.

"But it wouldn't go and so the idea was abandoned. Ever since the [illegible] made business has been growing. I believe it has almost doubled this week. We are paying the barbers only $12 a week and they are happy. The manicure girls have had their salaries scaled down, but they are radiant. The brush boys are chipper, and the chiropodist will soon outsmile any of us."

Ice Cream Sandwich Men on Strike.

Yesterday's labor troubles consisted of a strike of ice cream sandwich makers against the Consolidated Wafer Company, which makes the wafers for the sandwiches. The strikers objected to a reduction of wages, and demanded recognition of the Ice Cream Sandwich Makers' Union. There were about seventy-five of them. They want to keep on receiving 8 cents a box for day work and 9 cents for night work.

PAYING THE PIPER.

Mr. YOAKUM's remarks before the St. Louis Traffic Club cannot be dismissed as inspired by hostility either to the President or to his policy. Mr. YOAKUM, personally, and his railway and banking associates are conspicuous among the supporters of the Administration and of Government regulation of railways. Mr. YOAKUM repeats this in the address published yesterday, and yet he emphasizes the fact that in the year following the year in which railways voluntarily advanced wages $75,000,000 they are confronted with a loss of income of $400,000,000, of which about half is due directly to anti-railway legislation. As yet neither wages nor railway facilities have been reduced, but the inevitable bill for the legislative debauch is in plain sight if the road which has been traversed has no turn.

Mr. YOAKUM is guilty of contending that the people owe the railways something after they have paid their fares and freight bills. Over a series of years there has been a steady decrease of railway rates, and meanwhile limitless prairies have been enhanced in value almost limitlessly by railways, which have been attacked as enemies of the Republic. Predatory politicians, and legislators bereft of passes, have passed laws by the hundred, undermining the [illegible] of the railway structure, and [illegible] any perception that the railways have any rights which it be prudent to respect. SPENCER, FI[illegible]F, MCCREA, BROWN, INGALLS, M[illegible]HER, JOLINE, TRUESDALE are among railway men who have expressed warning sentiments like Mr. YOAKUM's. Until now the answer has been that the railways would do well to obey the laws lest a worse thing happen to them.

Well, the railways have fared badly, and the question now is whether the railways or the people suffer the more. There are two millions of wage-earners whose daily living is dependent upon the prosperity of the railways. There is, say, a score of billions of incorporated capital whose future hangs in the balance along with the railways, and whose trade would be wonderfully quickened by a resumption of railway expenditure upon the old basis. The railways might easily spend a hundred millions in rails alone, to say nothing of wages in construction and operation of new lines. Transportation development, which has been driven to Mexico and Canada, might stir with new life in the United States. We might have the old prosperity without its defects.

The cost of this delectable condition is moderate. Reaction is not necessary. Reform might hold what it has gained, and Mr. ROOSEVELT might retain all the glory he has won, be it more or less, and whatever its cost. The one essential thing is that the railways should have peace and stability. They can accommodate themselves to the laws as they are, but they cannot stand threats, accompanied by a campaign to deprive them of the protection of the courts, and the constitutional protection of their property. The bite of reform has not been so bad as its bark. The people, of course, can have their will, but they must make their choice between deeper depression of trade and greater unemployment, with a President whose watchword is "more of the same," or a return of the good times with a candidate of reasonable views and policies. Not even a democracy can have both inconsistent alternatives.

THE FIGHT AGAINST LAWLESSNESS

Commissioner BINGHAM sums up the police needs of this city in The North American Review for May. In only two civilized cities besides New York—namely, St. Petersburg and Lisbon—do such unusual conditions exist, and in the former there is one patrolman to every 184 inhabitants, in the latter one to every 175. New York, with its escaped foreign murderers, Anarchists, Socialists, Sicilian and Neapolitan feudists, Armenian Hunchakists, and Chinese Tongs; with 80 per cent. of all malefactors arraigned of foreign birth, and with large areas divided and subdivided by water and extending into sparsely settled districts—New York has but one patrolman to 547 inhabitants. London's patrol force is 13,268 strong, or one to 466 residents; it contains a smaller foreign element, and its areas built up compactly. In all other great Continental and American cities conditions are uniformly simpler, while an ampler distribution of police obtains than in this city. Our Detective Bureau, too, is of a primitive kind:

The police force itself, even the best men, would not recognize a high-grade, first-class, real "sleuth" if he came down the street headed by a brass band. To provide New York with one or two—possibly six—such real detectives would in results astonish and please her citizens as much as it would paralyze the crooks and crooked politicians.

A polyglot community of criminals may not be handled by ordinary means. A secret service is needed here. Our regular detectives are handicapped by ignorance of foreign tongues and habits; they are known, and they can be avoided. Mr. BINGHAM recommends that $25,000 be given to him for the first year, its expenditure to be audited by three citizens—the Mayor, the Controller, and the President of the Civil Service Commission—this amount for secret service to be increased to $100,000 annually thereafter. The force must be augmented in the ratio of one patrolman to 400 inhabitants as the population increases. Pawnbrokers and junk dealers, who must meet the competition of "fences," and are tempted by offers of stolen goods, must submit themselves, for their own protection and that of society, to new regulations of accounting. And to keep the politicians at bay and make the obedience of subordinates easy, the Commissioner should have a ten-year term in office, subject to dismissal upon published charges by the Mayor or the Governor.

A RAPID TRANSIT HINT.

When the Interborough tunnel entered Brooklyn Borough there was rejoicing, but not such immoderate joy as welcomes its extension to-day for a few blocks. The explanation of the singular contrast is that the few additional blocks of tunnel link together many miles of railway in systems otherwise disconnected. By the connection the usefulness of both is enhanced. The privilege of convenient travel between offices on Manhattan and homes on Long Island is extended to multitudes of passengers and hundreds of square miles of residential district. The great increase of taxable values is made doubly acceptable by the fact that it attests the scattering of population from overcrowded areas into areas sparsely populated, to the great gain in health and reduction of crime.

It is well to remark that this is not the only link between detached transportation systems which needed filling in. The Williamsburg Bridge ends nowhere in either borough, and even after the completion of improvements now making it will not be an easy bridge either to reach or to get away from. The Brooklyn Bridge has been in use a generation, and yet it is still necessary to walk a fraction of a mile to ride up Broadway, or to reach the west side elevated road. Passengers on the east side are compelled to change cars, although the missing link is distant but a few hundred feet. And there is now in process of elaboration a $7,000,000 terminal which will perpetuate this dislocation of travel.

It is difficult not to remark that the approximately perfect Interborough manner of connecting what should be connected is a union between private enterprises. The separation of what should be connected is an incident of public ownership, with consequent indifference to convenience of patrons. It is impossible to conceive of the Interborough being managed as the bridges are, or of the bridges being managed as they ought to be, in the Interborough manner. The engineering problems are trifling. It is a mere matter of traffic arrangement.

READINGS FROM HISTORY.

Mr. HENRY WATTERSON recently whiled away an hour unpledged to the society of admiring friends and the companionship of Mr. BRYAN by writing two columns or so for The Louisville Courier-Journal upon "The Political Outlook." It is all very interesting, as is everything that comes from Mr. WATTERSON's pen. Much of it is quite new, notably some of the writer's observations in the passage we here quote:

Throughout the long battle for a tariff for revenue only there continually appeared, always at the opportune moment in Democratic councils, a mysterious presence in obstruction. Now it was RANDALL; now it was BARNUM; now it was WHITNEY, and, finally, it was CLEVELAND, throwing away the fruits of an educational campaign bravely fought and brought at the polls in 1892 to a triumphant conclusion. I do now believe that in 1904 this combine nominated PARKER, a most able, upright man, with the purpose of electing him, but that, the Roosevelt-Cortelyou strategy appearing upon the scene and revealing its masked batteries and hidden rifle pits, it sought safety for itself and abandoned PARKER to his fate.

If you believe that, said PALMERSTON to the bunko man, you would believe anything. Doesn't Mr. WATTERSON here mistake an impulse or a momentary state of an active mind for a belief? It would require much evidence to remove the conviction that Judge PARKER was, in good faith and all earnestness, supported through the campaign and at the polls by those Democrats who urged his nomination. Mr. BRYAN, too, supported Judge PARKER. That is a matter of campaign record. But that Mr. BRYAN's personal admirers and followers were enthusiastic about the Democratic candidate is more than doubtful. It was felt that many of them would dislike to see any other Democrat successful where their idol had failed. Moreover, Mr. ROOSEVELT was much more to the liking of the Democratic radicals than Judge PARKER, and the remarkable figures of the election indicate that in considerable numbers they voted for him.

Mr. WATTERSON is, we believe, the first commentator upon American politics to place Mr. CLEVELAND among those who have obstructed tariff reform. The so-called free-trade plank that was thrust into the platform of 1892 amid the confusion and uproar of Convention strife was allowed to pass by Mr. CLEVELAND's friends because, at the moment, it would have been a tactical mistake to permit a vote to be taken on that single issue. Mr. CLEVELAND did not feel himself bound by that part of the platform, and said so frankly. Sincere and sensible tariff reformers among the Democrats did not approve it. But that is an insufficient basis upon which to found the charge that Mr. CLEVELAND has ever obstructed tariff reform.

His message of 1887, on the eve of the campaign, was entirely devoted to advocacy of a reduction of duties. That message was sent to Congress against the advice of some of the far-seeing politicians of the party. No man can say that in the campaign of 1892 Mr. CLEVELAND was not with heart and soul loyal to the reform cause. The tariff bill that was sent to him by Congress in 1894 did not receive his signature because it had been so mishandled and perverted from the intent of Chairman WILSON and his co-laborers in its authorship that the President felt constrained to disclaim any part of the responsibility for its enactment. In the judgment of candid reviewers of the political events of that year his refusal to sign the bill has been considered high and convincing evidence of his sound tariff reform convictions. By that refusal Mr. CLEVELAND threw away no fruits of the long educational campaign. It was a consistent and honorable act. We are afraid Mr. WATTERSON must have written in Mr. CLEVELAND's name by inadvertence.

AMERICAN PICTURES IN FRANCE.

It is interesting to know that hundreds of American painters are represented in the Paris Salon this Spring. It signifies many things, one being the comparative smallness of the world these days, another the restless desire of countless young Americans for means of self-expression, and still another the fact that the Salon, like the Royal Academy, is losing much of its old distinction. The number of reasonably famous and pecuniarily successful painters who do not send to the big exhibitions increases yearly. It is also true that the Salon increases in size yearly. The chances of a young painter who gets a place in one of these huge collections of paintings of all qualities gaining recognition thereby are exceedingly small.

To be sure the honor of gaining admittance to the Salon seems nearly as great as ever, because of the multitude of contestants. Rejection is the common lot in art as in all other fields of endeavor, as in life itself. Among the many young American exhibitors in this year's Salon there must be many who will never be admitted again, though they may paint better in the future, though they may prosper, as prosperity goes in the artist's career. There are a few of American birth who are as French as any of their colleagues; some who, like BOGGS and BRIDGEMAN, have lived longer in France than most of their associates of French birth. But there are others who are now enjoying their first and last Salon victory, somewhat oppressed by the reflection that it is not much of a victory after all, in spite of the thrill of joy the announcement of acceptance gave them.

The growth of the art spirit among Americans is wholesome enough, and there is no place to cultivate that spirit like Paris. Art is in the air there, but even there it is elusive, and the triumphs to be gained in its name are few in comparison with the disasters to which it leads. That the energy, zeal, courage, self-sacrifice of hundreds of young Americans are making themselves felt abroad, however, is a fact we may congratulate ourselves upon. It is worth while to be in the Salon, even if it does not mean as much as formerly. Influence does not count for much. The fact is that thousands are now painting very well, indeed, just as thousands of others are writing fluently and agreeably. The number of men and women with an important message, however, does not increase measurably from year to year.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Bad News from the Fleet.

Until our far-wandering navy reached Santa Barbara it seemed to please, and to be pleased by, every town, big or little, it visited. Hitherto all the reports have been of lavish and enthusiastic hospitality on the one side and of supersailorly, if not superhuman, regard for the proprieties on the other, and the confident expectation aroused by the experiences in many ports was that the warships would be missioners of peace and good-will wherever they went. But unfortunately they went to Santa Barbara, and Santa Barbara seems to be queer and different.

For there, while the people were apparently as glad to see the fleet as could have been desired, the rejoicings seem to have been over an unusual opportunity to put famine prices on everything, and the effort was to do the strangers, rather than to do for them. The most definite accusation yet made against the Santa Barbarians is that they charged two sailors $6 for a single meal. Whether that was too much or not depends a good deal upon what the two sailors ordered, but the mariner's pocketbook is rarely padlocked, and so accustomed is he to exploitation ashore that when he violently rebels against the price of what he wants the chances are that it is at least three times what anybody else would have had to pay. Against paying $6 for the meal the two sailors did violently rebel, and to make their violence more effective they called in the assistance of many other sailors, who, from the promptness with which they responded, seem to have had similar troubles of their own in Santa Barbara. Anyhow, they wrecked the restaurant, and a long black mark was made on the fleet's record for orderliness.

The crews complain, too, that nothing was done at Santa Barbara for their entertainment and edification. Be that as it may, the complaint shouldn't have been made, since it is a guest's duty to take what is offered him, whether much or little, and to look pleasant in either case. It may be that the bluejackets have been just a little spoiled by the attentions received in the course of their journey, and that they have developed a tendency to resent welcomes cooler than the warmest. If that is the case, somebody should give them good advice in a loud, stern voice as soon as is convenient, lest they quite forget their pretty manners and forget that they are not boys on a lark, but men engaged in the serious business of proving their efficiency as professional defenders of their country.

A Wonder of Legislation.

As the members of the Philippine Assembly propose cutting their own salaries as well as those of the native Judges and Commissioners, the sincerity of their desire to decrease public expenditures would seem to be beyond question, but there is something so queer about this demonstration of economy that the inclination to seek another explanation of what seems to be self-sacrificing patriotism is almost irresistible.

Sad experience has taught Occidental legislators the danger of adding to their own salaries, and they usually think a good while before they do it, but voluntary reductions are pretty nearly unthinkable. Of course, the Filipinos are not yet very well versed in the conduct of representative government, and they are likely to make strange mistakes. Yet this is about the last mistake they would have been expected to make, for under the Spaniards they had the best of opportunities to learn that when funds run short the thing to do is to find some new thing to tax or some old thing that can be taxed a little more.

The dispatch from Manila says that the reduction scheme is likely to cause trouble between the appointive and the elective branches of the Insular Government, and that a purpose to decrease the efficiency of the administration is suspected. This only adds to the mystery. Perhaps its solution would be easier if more facts were at hand and one knew the circumstances better. That is often the case.

$2,109 FOR A $10 GOLD COIN.

Was Minted in 1849 by a California Mining Company.

News reached this city yesterday in a private cable dispatch from London that the highest premium ever brought by a California gold coin was paid yesterday at Sotheby's sale of the coin collection of H. Osborne O'Hagan, when $2,109 was bid for the very rare ten-dollar gold piece issued in 1849 at San Francisco by the Cincinnati Mining and Trading Company.

American collectors expected that a new record would be made, and Thomas L. Elder, the well-known coin expert of New York City, had cabled a bid of $1,700. The much-prized piece fell to an American collector whose identity is not disclosed.

Only one other specimen of the Cincinnati Mining and Trading Company gold piece is known, that being in the United States Mint at Philadelphia. There is also a five-dollar piece of the same design, a specimen of which is in the coin room of the Philadelphia Mint.

There were many other rare American coins sold, which brought good prices, such as two fine specimens of the California octagonal fifty-dollar gold pieces of 1851 and 1852, a five-dollar gold piece struck at the private mint of Norris, Grigg & Norris at San Francisco in 1849, a fine specimen of the Colorado private gold coinage of 1860 in the two-and-one-half-dollar piece of Clark, Gruber & Co. of Denver, and a "Deseret Assay Office" five-dollar gold piece struck at the private mint of Brigham Young at Salt Lake City in 1860. Another oddity was the Washington cent of 1783, which usually is of copper, but in this sale a piece from the same dies in gold was auctioned.

Mr. Paderewski's Recital.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reference to your article as to Mr. Paderewski's conduct on the occasion of his recital at the Plaza, kindly given by him for the benefit of the Music School Settlement, I beg to say that it is entirely misleading.

Any one who understands how careful a pianist must be of his hands knows that even a slight wound from a bit of rusty nail wire could force him to cancel an engagement and thus disappoint the public. It was this fear that prevented Mr. Padrewski from picking up the wreath offered him, as he personally explained to me. When the boy who had presented the wreath was introduced to Mr. Paderewski after the recital he was most gracious. Indeed, no one who knows Mr. Paderewski personally could imagine him capable of rudeness or ungraciousness, especially to children, whom he adores.

As to the lights, which were arranged with the approval of Mr. Paderewski, he expressed entire satisfaction with them. Sitting in a box directly over Mr. Paderewski, I should have heard any talking in the audience and easily observed if he had stopped playing, neither of which happened, your article to the contrary notwithstanding. Mr. Paderewski did speak of a draught on the back of his neck, which, as he explained to me, is paralyzing to a pianist, and between two numbers he left the stage to see if it could be remedied.

Mr. Paderewski had at great personal inconvenience changed the date of the recital in order to oblige the committee. He arrived in New York at 2 o'clock, having played the night before in Pennsylvania. Under the circumstances, he should be treated with the greatest consideration instead of being unjustly criticised.

I make this statement on behalf of a great artist, whose gracious attitude toward the Music School Settlement added nearly $4,000 to its treasury. MRS. A. M. DITSON, for the Committee.

An Appeal to a Stony Heart.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see W. J. Lampton protests against doing baseball, but I wish you would put him back on the job and make him stay there. I don't often read the sporting news, but I can't get away from those infernal, unforgettable, "Punch in the presence of the passenjare" yawps of his—those corrugated verses, with a skyline like lower Manhattan, that sound like rolling pumpkins over a barn floor, and are printed on the editorial page. I always read that, of course.

I consider it a waste of my time to read them. But if I carefully cut one out and throw it away, that consumes still more time; because my wastebasket is usually full, and it often takes several minutes, later, to find the thing again, just to see what he is chortling about to-day, anyway! The Anti-Tipping Propaganda.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Not until I could get decent service for fair pay would I build a country house to blackmail my guests with the expectation of tips. Cordiality! I hope you have enlisted in a war to the finish. I believe you will find recruits among your editorial brethren, and I believe, further, that some day we could look for the crystallization of public sentiment on this subject in some excellent magazine articles by men who will be read. DEFENDS USE OF SNAKE POISON

NO "SOLEMN NONSENSE"

Fangs of South American Lanceheaded Viper Contained a Drug of "Undreamed Possibilities."

Dr. Walter Sands Mills, President of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the County of New York and associate editor of The North American Journal of Homoeopathy, has sent to THE TIMES the following communication:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg leave to take exception to an article on your editorial page of Tuesday, April 28, entitled "Snakes Do Have Their Uses," and to one of to-day entitled "A Last Word About Lachesis." These two editorial comments were written in a vein that hardly comports with the dignity of a great paper. That, perhaps, is excusable. But the statements made are at variance with the facts.

On Saturday, and again on Monday, considerable space was given in your news columns to a description of a specimen of the Lachesis trigonocephalus, or lanceheaded viper, which had been imported by a homoeopathic pharmacist for medicinal purposes, and to a description of the modus operandi of removing the venom. The accounts were accurate and well written. Yesterday and to-day, however, you intimate editorially that the whole thing was fraud and humbug. This I wish to correct.

The lanceheaded viper is a native of South America. His is one of the most deadly of the snake poisons. For that reason, although plentiful enough, live specimens are not readily procured. In the nine years' history of the Bronx Zoo, the authorities there tell me, they have had not over half a dozen specimens of the lachesis all told. These have all died after a short time in captivity. The present specimen was imported for a definite purpose, to procure the venom. I was one of the fortunate ones to see the operation performed. The skill and expedition with which Dr. Ditmars, the Curator of the reptile house, and Mr. Snyder, his assistant, handled the snake and got the poison was remarkable and worth going far to see. Surely, there was no "solemn nonsense" about that. That was intensely real.

The statement of your writer that lachesis (as the homeopathic preparation is called) is of no medicinal value is absolutely false. Many lives have been saved by it, as can be testified to by many physicians of the homeopathic school. Its greatest value is in cases of profound blood poisoning, septic conditions due to various causes, like the most severe forms of diphtheria, scarlet fever, erysipelas, and cases of that kind, where the patient is almost in collapse, with delirium, weak pulse, and so on. Cases such as these are not the kind that one would be apt to pick out for "suggestive" treatment.

The action of lachesis differs from that of other snake poisons in many details, when given according to the homeopathic law, so that lachesis does have certain virtues that the others have not.

This is neither the time nor the place to enter on an explanation of or a defense of homeopathy. I may say this, however, that according to the homeopathic law, similia similibus curantur, likes are cured by likes. The various remedies used have been tried on healthy people and the symptoms produced carefully recorded. In treating the sick the symptoms are obtained and the drug given which has produced similar symptoms in the well. Lachesis has been tested in this way and is given accordingly.

Your writer makes some sneering remarks about potency, dilution, and so on, and makes haste to state that the homeopathic preparation is not to be confounded with the snake serums prepared as antidotes to snake poison. He intimates that one is absurd because of dilution and the other is not. The lachesis venom extracted on Sunday was immediately triturated with a definite proportion of sugar of milk. The medicinal preparations will be made from that. How is snake antitoxin made? A horse is injected with snake poison, first using a very minute quantity, then from day to day using larger and still larger doses, till what is known as a full dose can be given without producing symptoms. After a time a quantity of blood is drawn from the jugular vein of the horse; this is allowed to stand till the clot separates. The serum remaining is the antitoxin. This process of antitoxin making takes several months. Can any human being estimate to what extent the snake poison has been diluted?

Your writer states that he expresses the opinion of "doctors worthy of the name" when he says that neither "this snake venom nor that of any other, administered as these men purpose to use it, has any known or demonstrated medicinal efficiency." That is false, every word of it. There are some twelve thousand homeopathic physicians in these United States, the vast majority of whom can testify to the contrary from direct observation. The homeopathic armamentarium contains many things not to be found elsewhere. Its possibilities are undreamed of by those who know nothing of it. The proof of the pudding is the eating thereof. Statistics show better results under homeopathic medicinal treatment than under that of any other method so far used.

In closing I wish to state that lachesis is a remedy of very great value and that it will be found in the office of every well-equipped homeopathic physician. Homeopathists have no apologies to make at this late day for their intellectual, scientific, or social status.

WALTER SANDS MILLS, M. D.

New York, April 29, 1908.

A Professional View of The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An editorial writer myself and long an admirer of THE TIMES, I want to express my appreciation of two articles in particular which you have given to the public this week. I refer to your masterly sermon upon the disgusting proceedings of the Cosmopolitan Club and your able expose of the remarkable and absurd "story" concerning the lancehead snake and its venom—remarkable because it was apparently authorized by men of science, who should realize that the American public of the twentieth century is rather more enlightened than the ignorant masses of the Dark Ages.

It is pleasant to reflect that no other institution has tended more to the distribution of this enlightenment than the press, of which THE TIMES is so splendid an example, in grateful contrast to that portion which, ruled by the counting room, panders to the lovers of sensationalism, to the ignorant and credulous, to the superstitious and the fanatical, arraying class against class, poverty against wealth, labor against capital, instead of trying to weld these subdivisions of society into one indestructible, undivided whole.

All true Americans may well be proud of THE TIMES. PLAIN SPEAKER.

New York, April 30, 1908.

To Laugh.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"A DISGUSTING EXHIBITION."

What Is Being Said of the Black and White Dinner.

From The Richmond News-Leader.

A very disgusting exhibition was the dinner of the Cosmopolitan Club of New York the other night, at which the majority of the men present were white and the majority of the women colored. The avowed object of the club is to bring about closer relations between the white and colored races. This the club succeeded in doing on the occasion in question, but in the end such experiments are far from calculated to bring about "better relations" between the races.

Demoralizing and Dangerous.

From The Baltimore Sun.

If all the men who are actively in sympathy with the work of this organization and brazenly advocate its doctrines in public were obscure persons without influence, the movement would still be demoralizing and dangerous. But it appears from published reports of the incidents and speeches at the "social equality" banquet that certain men of standing in New York are affiliated with this movement to obliterate racial distinctions, to erase the color line by miscegenation and amalgamation. Their identification with the "Cosmopolitan Society's" propaganda of social equality and mixed marriages compels more serious consideration of the subject than might otherwise be necessary. Our esteemed contemporary, THE NEW YORK TIMES, condemning the banquet as a manifestation of certain evil forces which will "provoke public disgust and indignation," adds:

"The wise friends of the negro race, those high-minded and philanthropic men who have given of their time, their thought, and their substance for its welfare and advancement, will be appalled by this performance."

They may well be "appalled"; but it is to be hoped that they will not be so overcome by "disgust and indignation" that they will be unable to express their sentiments frankly and strongly on the doctrine of race equality and miscegenation suggested at the black and white banquet.

"Objectionable Brood of Fanatics."

From The Wilkesbarre News.

Truly "it takes all kinds of people to make a world." The members of the New York Cosmopolitan Society who were responsible for the gathering the other night at which white girls and black men sat down to dinner together on terms of equality, are the latest and most objectionable brood of fanatics, or worse, to flaunt themselves in the face of the public. A lunatic asylum would seem to be the proper place for the bunch of "cosmopolitans" who thus brazenly advocated the intermarriage of the white and black races.

"Silly Acts of Silly People."

From The Baltimore News.

Speaking of the dinner of the so-called "Cosmopolitan Society of Greater New York," at which more than one hundred black men and black women sat side by side with white men and white women and at which social equality and intermarriage were discussed, THE NEW YORK TIMES says:

"In the South it will be discussed with a degree of passion and resentment that must inevitably intensify existing differences and retard works of beneficence undertaken in behalf of the negroes."

Undoubtedly in the South where any attention at all is paid to the incident it will be regarded with extreme disgust and as an exhibiton of mistaken and mawkish sentimentality; but it would be deplorable if any such result should follow as is predicted by our contemporary. We dislike to think that the great race problem—a solution of which is being so earnestly sought by right-thinking white men and right-thinking black men—can be retarded by the silly talk or the silly acts of a set of silly men and women. We much prefer to believe that the South will dismiss the performance in New York with the contemptuous indifference it deserves.

Widening the Breach.

From The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

The Cosmopolitan Society of Brooklyn held a banquet function Monday evening which may provoke an unusual amount of interest and comment. If correctly reported, it was a mixed assemblage of white and colored persons with pronounced views on the color and race question. The mere fact that a considerable number of men and women of both races, the white and the black, sat down to the same table for a banquet of itself would excite comment, but when the occasion was distinguished by the announcement of views in favor of the intermarriage of the races the significance of it was greatly emphasized. It seems unnecessary to say that the views might better have been left unexpressed. The race question in this country is acute and difficult enough now without having social equality and amalgamation foolishly injected into it. Neither the negroes nor the whites, as a body, are troubling themselves over the question of intermarriage, and it is a great mistake for a few extremists to intensify and embitter existing antipathies by proposing views and schemes which are practically unworkable.

Too Much of It Already.

From The Rochester Times.

The mixture of races and colors is not the ideal to be held before the negro. There has been too much of this already, legalized and otherwise. True, color is but skin deep. But there are other racial characteristics that go deeper, and it is safe to assume that it never was intended by the Creator of mankind that the distinctions which He implanted should be effaced through intermarriage, otherwise He would not have made the variegated hues.

The wise thing for the black man to do in this country is to become a useful and proficient citizen, and to marry a useful and proficient black wife and rear children in kind. That is the pathway along which progress can be made with the least resistance. A time will come when the hand of every good white will be outstretched, not to hinder but to help the black man forward, if he shall elect to go forward in this wise manner. Miscegenation would simply make a bad matter worse.

Black and White Socialists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your leading editorial in this morning's TIMES entitled "As an Admonition," in which you wax justly indignant at the spectacle of one hundred men and women—white and black, and mostly Socialists—sitting together at dinner and calmly discussing the intermarriage of whites and negroes, deserves to be printed as a broadside and a copy placed in the hands of every white citizen of this country. In thus exposing the ultimate purposes of a certain brand of Socialists, you have performed a great public service.

It is indeed marvelous that men who go into hysterics over the monkey dinners of the Newport set should feel no compunction in participating in an Afro-American-amalgamation banquet, which in its ultimate effects will be a thousandfold more pernicious.

CAUCASIAN INDIVIDUALIST.

New York, April 29, 1908.

Advocates No Kind of Marriage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am erroneously quoted in your issue of this morning, in the item on the much-discussed Cosmopolitan dinner, as saying that I believe in interracial marriages. But no one has a better right than I to believe in "mixed marriages," since marriages of such character account for my presence in the world.

But I advocate no kind of marriage, because its advocacy is not my business.

Wants More Pen Portraits.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Bliss Carman's tribute as a fellow-craftsman to Mr. Hale's pen portrait of the President, and incidentally to THE TIMES for setting the standard, strikes a strong chord that should be kept vibrating.

Greater New York and the general public not engaged in pen-worship of any particular candidate of any party would welcome more of this kind of "top-notch journalism," illustrated by like studies of several public men now in executive office. Mayor George B. McClellan for one, though the writer is a Republican "who says it." J. H. J.

BATTLESHIP FLEET OFF FOR MONTEREY

Will Be Divided There Into Two Squadrons, One of Which Will Go to Santa Cruz.

WILL BE REUNITED MAY 4

Then Under Command of Evans It Will Sail for San Francisco—The Admiral In Good Spirits.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., April 30.—The Atlantic battleship fleet sailed this morning for Monterey, where anchors will be dropped to-morrow at 7 A. M.

After one day at Monterey the two squadrons of the fleet will separate, the eight ships of the first squadron steaming across the bay to Santa Cruz for a three days' stay. They will be joined at Santa Cruz by the second squadron on May 4, in order that the entire fleet may be there for twenty-four hours. Then on May 5 Admiral Evans will resume command just as the fleet is about to leave Santa Cruz for the Golden Gate.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., April 30.—Rear Admiral Evans rested well last night, and was in excellent spirits to-day.

PEKING, April 30.—Chinese officials received information at a late hour to-day that the American fleet of battleships will not visit Che-foo, as had been expected here. Eight of the battleships late in October will call at Amoy.

This news is regarded here as meaning that the American Government has reconsidered its acceptatnce of the invitation extended by China for the fleet to visit a Chinese port; in other words, that the visit has been virtually abandoned.

This is understood in Peking to be a result of representations made by American officials in China, who feel that the fleet should not come to a Chinese port. These Americans argue that, owing to political conditions, such a visit would give China a false impression in the matter of the attitude and the intentions of the United States regarding Manchuria. China had planned an extensive programme for the American visitors, and was preparing to give them an unprecedented welcome.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The Navy Department is anxious that the battleships of the Atlantic Fleet shall get to work at their Fall target practice in the Philippines as soon as possible. This is given as one of the reasons why only one squadron of eight vessels of the fleet is to stop at Amoy, China. After a stay there of six days the ship will join the others at Manila.

GRATEFUL TO LOS ANGELES.

Sailors of New Jersey Offer Gift to City Which Treated Them So Well.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 30.—Mayor Harper of Los Angeles to-day received a letter from Chief Yeoman A. J. Marshall of the battleship New Jersey, who, on behalf of the crew, asks to be informed which the city would prefer, a public fountain or a tablet, as an expression of the appreciation of the men of the entertainment they received during their recent stay in this city.

The Mayor and the members of the Entertainment Committee have received several individual expressions of gratitude from sailors and marines.

NEW THEORY OF PNEUMONIA.

Seat of Trouble Not In Lungs, but In Nose—Simple Remedy.

CHICAGO, April 30.—The announcement of a new theory as to the cause of pneumonia and the discovery of a remedy for the disease was made last night at a meeting of the Chicago Medical Society.

Dr. H. Manning Fish declared that the seat of trouble in pneumonia was not, as is generally supposed, in the lungs, but in the small cells in the bony framework at the top of the nose. The pneumococcus, or disease germ, he said, was not harmful except when pent up in a cell of this sort. Then, he explained, it acted like an explosive, began to expand, and was absorbed by the blood and became one of the most dangerous of disease germs.

"From these cells the disease works rapidly down to the lungs, and to all appearances these organs immediately become the seat of trouble," said the physician. "However, the fuel which is feeding the flames of disease still is being furnished from the cells at the top of the nose.

"The simple remedy, consequently, is to draw this dangerous pus from these cells. That is what was done in a case which I attended, and in twenty-four hours the disease had disappeared. The lungs, of course, were still affected, and it took days before the patient finally was able to leave his bed."

WILL TRY MUSIC DIRECTOR.

Board of Education Committee After Some Doubts Proceeds.

After what were declared to be signs of weakening on the part of some members of the Board of Education, the board's Committee on Buildings has decided to go on with the trial of the charges against Frank R. Rix, one of the two directors of music in the public schools.

It is understood that twice Mr. Rix appeared at the time of the committee's meeting, with counsel, and presumably ready to go on with the trial, but while the committee itself had its heart in the work before it some other members of the board doubted the wisdom of pressing the matter further.

It got out yesterday that the committee decided at its last executive meeting to take a fresh start under new conditions, and to hear the charges of "neglect of duty and misconduct" against the music director to the end. The committee will begin taking testimony next Monday.

MAY.

A golden Sprite, escaping from its chain
Beyond the snow-capped hills, hath, in its flight
Across the meadows, ere the morning light,
Rekindled earth to happiness again.

A vagrant note from Winter's broken lute—
Uplifted softly on a passing breeze,
Hath sounded, clarionlike, among the trees,
Awaking echoes for a season mute.

Up from its grave in harsh, unfeeling mold,
All incense-laden, sprang a lonely flower,
And now in every shady woodland bower
A million violets their grace unfold.

The feeble flicker of hope's dying flame
Hath caught life's glory, and from ashes gray,
A brave ambition—promise of the May—
Leaps with new rapture toward the light of fame.

FUNERAL OF DR. DIX TO BE AT TRINITY

Bishop Potter, Too Ill to Attend, Sends a Letter to the Clergy Through the Newspapers.

DR. MANNING TO OFFICIATE

Assistant Rector Is Expected to be Named as Dr. Dix's Successor in Trinity Parish.

Arrangements have been completed for holding funeral services in Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall Street, to-morrow morning at 10:30 o'clock for the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, rector of the church, who died on Wednesday night at his home, 27 West Twenty-seventh Street.

Thousands of telegrams from all sections of the Christian world were received yesterday at the Dix home offering condolences to the family in their loss as well as the loss sustained by the Protestant Episcopal Church, of which Dr. Dix was dean of the clergy. After 8 o'clock in the morning there was a constant stream of callers at the house to leave cards for the breaved family, and many floral offerings commenced to arrive at an early hour.

It was decided that the funeral service should be as impressive as the ritual of the Protestant Episcopal Church permits, yet as simple and unostentatious as the life and customs of Dr. Dix. The body in a massive coffin was taken to Trinity Church last night and placed temporarily in one of the chapels where a delegation of the clergy kept vigil over it.

This morning, after the celebration of the Holy Eucharist at 11 o'clock, the coffin will be placed in the chancel to remain until the services to-morrow morning. During the time the coffin is in the chancel it will be closed, and there will be no public view of the body. The church will, as usual, be open to the public, but the portion of the chancel where the body is to lie will be roped off.

Dr. Manning to Read the Service.

The funeral service will be read by the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, assistant rector, assisted by the clergy of the parish.

Special arrangements are being made for the accommodation of the entire clergy of Greater New York and a large number of visiting clergymen. The clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church will occupy the pews in the centre of the church, and pews will also be reserved for clergy of other denominations, many of whom have expressed a desire to pay their respects to the memory of Dr. Dix, whose work in New York has affected those of all creeds. Admission to the church will be by card.

It had been the hope of Bishop Potter to be able to conduct the funeral service, but he announced to a reporter for THE TIMES last night that he regretted very deeply that he would not be able to leave his home on account of ill health. Bishop Potter has not been well for some time, and, although he has been able until now to give some attention to his duties, the strain has told upon him, and he has been ordered by his physicians to remain at home and take a complete rest until he recovers his strength.

Letter to Clergy from Bishop Potter.

By reason of the fact that he cannot attend the funeral, and on account of the short space of time elapsing between now and the funeral of Dr. Dix, Bishop Potter last night asked THE TIMES to print the following letter to his clergy, which he feared would not reach them in time if sent in the regular course of the mails:

"Men, Brethren, and Fathers: A loss has come to the Diocese of New York, to describe which it is not easy to find words. Dr. Morgan Dix was so preeminently a part of the diocese, as the rector of Trinity Church, as the President of the Standing Committee, as the Chairman of a great host of organized good works, that it is difficult to think of the church without him.

"But he was, most of all, dear to those of us who really knew him for personal qualities altogether exceptional. He united with a lofty ecclesiasticism a singular tenderness for humanity, whatever its errors of faith or conduct; he touched life at so many points with sentiment equally refined, faithful, and gracious, that no one could know him without the homage of affectionate respect for great and rare gifts.

"If, as I understand, his funeral is to be on Saturday of this week, I trust that the reverend clergy will use at Morning Prayer on next Sunday the prayer beginning: 'Almighty and Ever Living God, we yield unto Thee most high praise,' &c. Very faithfully yours,

"HENRY C. POTTER.

"April 30, 1908."

Dr. Dix's Successor.

By the direction of the Vestry, the Rev. Dr. Manning, assistant rector, has assumed charge of the parish and will perform the duties heretofore performed by Dr. Dix.

It is understood, although not discussed officially on account of the short time since the death of Dr. Dix, that Dr. Manning will at the proper time be elected rector of the parish.

Dr. Manning is at present vicar of St. Agnes's Chapel, in West Ninety-Second Street, and four years ago was made assistant rector of Trinity. Before that time, Dr. Dix had never had an assistant. At about the time Dr. Manning became assistant rector of Trinity, he received a tender of the office of Bishop of the See of Harrisburg, Penn., but declined it, it is understood, at the earnest solicitation of the Vestry of Trinity Parish, with the understanding that if he would accept the assistant rectorship he should be the successor of Dr. Dix.

Dr. Manning has worked for a long time with Dr. Dix in the conduct of the work of the parish and is familiar with every detail of it. He will therefore be able to take up the work where Dr. Dix left off and carry to completion such of it as was left undone at the death of Dr. Dix.

Trinity's Great Wealth.

As rector of the parish Dr. Dix had under his immediate control nine churches and twenty-six clergymen. In addition to his church work he had great responsibilities in a business way. The Trinity Church Corporation owns property estimated at $39,000,000 or more, and pays taxes on $18,000,000.

There was probably no clergyman in the Protestant Episcopal Church more opposed to divorce than Dr. Dix, and in 1904, after the Episcopal Church in America refused to take a decisive stand against divorce, he led his parish in declaring that no divorced person should be married in any of its churches.

A large and beautiful new building for the Crippled Children's East Side Free School was dedicated last evening with interesting exercises in the assembly hall of the building at 155 and 157 Henry Street. The hall was decorated with flags, and there were addresses and music. Mrs. Henry Goldman, the President, presided, and Mrs. David Leventritt, Mrs. Julius Hart, and Mrs. S. Sinn, the Vice Presidents, were on the platform. The exercises opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, and the feature of the evening was the presentation of the key of the building by Philip Lehman, son of the late Emanuel Lehman, representing the Emanuel Lehman foundation.

The building and a sum toward the endowment of the work was the gift of the late Mr. Lehman, whose portrait hung among the flags at the back of the platform, with a cluster of roses falling over the frame. Mrs. Goldman, as President of the society, received the key and made the response.

William H. Maxwell of the Board of Education made the first address, speaking of the good done by private philanthropies in beginning work to be continued with public funds. He said that he believed it was the duty of the Commonwealth, in its educational work, to care not only for those who were normal, but others afflicted in any way, and mentioned the work done along these lines by the Board of Education.

Prof. Duggan, representing President Finley of the College of the City of New York, spoke of the waste products in the world, which, as time went on, were being used.

Among the wants mentioned in a list put in the entrance hall of the building were, first, money, then a piano, 100 chairs for the assembly hall, and pictures for all parts of the building.

Over 100 crippled children attend the school, and are made partially or entirely self-supporting.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 30.—An even break was the best that the New York Nationals could get in their quest for victories here. The Giants won the first two contests, and the Beaneaters bagged the next two.

To-day's game was decided by Frank Bowerman, formerly of the Giants, who drove in the winning run in the ninth inning with a hit that would have been worth a home run had more than one run been needed to decide the game, but Bowerman got credit for only a double. Bowerman was very much in evidence all afternoon, and he consequently was highly delighted when he helped to accomplish the defeat of his erstwhile pals.

New York's defeat to-day was chiefly due to errors by Shannon, Nicklin, and Bridwell. Every error was costly, and even though the Giants outbatted Boston slightly, the misplays proved too much of a handicap to overcome.

Crandall deserved to win. He pitched very well for the Giants, and led them at bat with a home run and two singles.

The Giants scored two runs in the fifth on Crandall's homer, an error, and Tenney's two-base drive. By good batting, following errors by Nicklin and Shannon, Boston tied the score in the eighth. Bridwell fumbled Sweeney's sharp hit in the ninth, and Bowerman drove the ball over the fence, Sweeney scoring the winning run before Bowerman reached third base. The score:

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—Washington and Philadelphia played in the rain here to-day, Umpire Connolly finally stopping the game at the end of the eighth inning, with Washington ahead, 2 to 1. The grounds were in frightful condition long before the game was called, but despite this, neither team made an error. Street scored the deciding run with a home-run drive into the left field bleachers. Pitcher Falkenberg of Washington was to-day indefinitely suspended by President Johnson. The score:

To Decide Soccer Championship.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 30.—A meeting of representatives of the Intercollegiate Soccer Football League will be held about the middle of May to award the championship for the season. Yale and Haverford are tied for first place, and the Haverford Faculty, having played a time limit on the game, the tie game cannot be played off. As Yale beat Haverford in the single match played by the two it is regarded as probable here that the championship will be awarded to Yale.

Snow Stops Racing in Kentucky.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 30.—By reason of the heavy snow to-day, this afternoon's races were called off. It was first intended to run off to-day's card on Monday, or give a double programme, but as this would have required special action of the State Racing Commission, it was decided to take no action other than abandoning to-day's races.

Jockey J. Sumter Hurt in a Fall.

Jockey J. Sumter, a successful lightweight rider under engagement to J. H. McCormick, was thrown from the horse Patriot just after the start of the third race at the Jamaica track yesterday, and was so badly injured that he remained unconscious for three hours after the accident. He was later taken to the home of his employer, as it was said that his injuries were not serious, though he suffered severe sprains and bruises.

Our boys' clothing keeps forging ahead—each year the sales of higher priced suits are a greater part.

Not that we're any less strong on the lower priced suits.

It's simply that more people are realizing that we have at moderate prices exactly the same sort of clothes that the few first-class tailors who bother with boys' suits make at extravagant figures.

RED RIVER REPEATS IN THE PAUMONOK

Wilson's Colt, Winner of Stakes Last Year, Again First in Jamaica Feature.

ROSEBEN FINISHES LAST

With half a gale blowing through the open stands and rain threatening every moment of the afternoon, racegoers put in an unpleasant afternoon at the Jamaica track yesterday, not the least unpleasant part of which was the defeat of the post choices in four of the six events. The fields that made up the races were light and of moderate quality, and as a balance to this the attendance showed a big falling off from the holiday crowd of the opening. In spite of the gloom and high wind, the track remained so fast, however, that in the feature event of the day, Red River, the winner, repeating his victory for the same stakes, the Paumonok Handicap, last season, galloped the six-furlong course in 1:12 3-5, and set a new record for the stakes.

The Paumonok brought out the best field as regards class that ran in the course of the day, though at that it lost four of the entries named on the card by scratches. The runners included the old champion sprinter Roseben, with the top weight, 130 pounds; Red River, the contender with Jack Atkin at the finish of the Carter Handicap, Restigouche, and Rialto, with the betting choices in about the order of the naming. Roseben, in spite of his rather poor showing at Aqueduct, was sent to the post as a strong favorite at 8 to 5, while it was about an equal thing between Restigouche and Red River as the next choices.

As in all the races of the day, the start was rather ragged, Red River going away in the lead and racing on in front as the pacemaker, while Roseben, away fairly well, dropped back from the first jump. Restigouche, all but left and crowded behind the field in the run through the back stretch, moved after Red River on the last turn, and closed a lot of ground, but never got near enough to the pacemaker to be really dangerous, Red River winning easily by two lengths, with Restigouche second, a similar distance in front of Rialto, third. Roseben, beaten early in the race, straggled in last.

In the race for two-year-olds the post favorites were beaten, with a second choice successful when Ramble beat Ceremonius in the third race, and the longest chance of the day successful when Melissa galloped in front all the way, and at odds of 25 to 1 captured the closing race. Melissa carried the colors of P. J. Dwyer, and her victory was the first of the year for the Dwyer stable.

The coincidence of horses that have been sold winning on their first appearance in the colors of a new owner, which was marked at Aqueduct, was continued when Mark Anthony II., claimed out of a selling race from R. F. Carman, started in the name of Thomas Newton in the mile and a sixteenth handicap. Molesey was the favorite, but Mark Anthony II. went to the front at the lifting of the barrier, and, making all the pace, won rather easily by four lengths, after Molesey forced him to a mild drive near the head of the stretch.

The only winning choices were Queen Marguerite, which led all the way in the opening race, and Bad News, which at odds on had the closest call of the day in the selling mile and a sixteenth, fifth on the card.

CONKLIN BEATS RE ROLLE.

Chicago Billiard Expert Wins from Frenchman by Score of 400 to 341.

C. F. Conklin of the Chicago Athletic Club last night scored a notable victory over Lucien Re Rolle of the Amateur Billiard Club of France in the 18.2 balkline amateur billiard championship tournament at the Liederkranz Club, when he took the measure of the Frenchmen by the score of 400 to 341. The victory was well earned. For the first half of the game the players kept on fairly even terms, but in the twenty-sixth inning, with the score 238 to 231, in favor of Conklin, the latter began to draw away, and with consecutive runs of 43, 58, and 53 placed the result beyond doubt. During the early stages of the game the play was far below the average, but when Conklin struck his gait he scored very fast. His average was 13 23-29 against 11 22-39 by the Frenchman. The latter played a great uphill game at the finish, making a run of 103.

In the afternoon game J. Ferdinand Poggenburg of New York scored an easy victory over E. W. Gardner of Passaic by the score of 400 to 196. Poggenburg held the upper hand practically throughout the game.

Both Re Rolle and Conklin opened the second game in poor fashion. The French champion again won the bank and missed his opening shot. Conklin replied with one carom, and the aggregate total of the contesting players for the first eight innings was but 38, a grand average of a trifle over 2. The Frenchman was the first to show any form. On a difficult leave he made a long rail draw and brought the spheres together at the top of the table, and by continual playing in and out of balk ran 45 points before he missed a simple cushion shot. With 30 in the minority Conklin settled down and gradually cut down his opponent's lead. On his thirty-first shot, a half-massé follow, he overtook the leader and carried his total for the inning to the same as that made by Re Rolle in the latter's half of the innings. Conklin's cue work was superior to that of his opponent.

Open table play was the feature of Conklin's next run of importance. Several times the object ball was in a direct line with the other two, but the Chicago expert extricated himself from the difficult positions by masterly massés or one or two cushion shots, with an occasional bank. On his nineteenth shot, which was a long draw, he reached the first century and seven shots later fell down on an attempt at two cushions, the object ball kissing the red and robbing him of the point. In Rerolle's next essay he executed a difficult five-cushion shot off the black ball. Conklin's hard luck continued in his next turn at the table, when after getting the spheres nicely rolling another kiss ended a run of 17.

Rerolle gave a splendid exhibition in his sixteenth inning. He played a variety of shots and showed a wonderful versatility with the cue. All shots looked easy to him, and he executed them with a delicacy of touch that was amazing and brought forth frequent outbursts of applause. After compiling 65 he misjudged a straight carom in playing for position and missed the second ball. Close nursing and short draw's enabled the French amateur to put together 51 points in his nineteenth essay at the table. With a run of 25 in the twenty-first inning, the Chicago player again took the lead after tripping up on an easy massé.

Conklin gave a series of brilliant shots in the twenty-sixth and two subsequent innings. He gained confidence as the game progressed, and essayed almost impossible shots from both ends and sides of the table. He ran 43, 58, and 53 in succession, and only missed running out the necessary score by a miscue. Re Rolle, facing a defeat of 164, played pluckily, running 103 points, the highest run of the game, and established an American record. Conklin ran out the game with 8 points in the twenty-ninth inning.

J. Ferdinand Poggenburg redeemed himself in the afternoon game for two previous defeats by winning from E. W. Gardner by a wide margin. The winner played a steady, consistent game, running out his string by well-executed breaks of good length rather than by a brilliant exhibition. For the first time during the tournament he showed good form, his bank and massé shots being the conspicuous feature of the contest.

Schaefer Forfeits Billiard Title.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Jacob Schaefer to-day forfeited to George Sutton the world's title at 18.1 balk line style of billiards, not being able to defend his championship on account of sickness. This is the third time that Sutton has held the 18.1 championship, although he has never won the title by actual play. Schaefer forfeited to Sutton in Paris, and later Willie Hoppe went abroad and did not defend the title. Hoppe will meet Sutton to-morrow night here at 18.1 billiards for the championship.

SCHOOLBOYS IN REGATTA.

National Interscholastic Rowing Championship to be Decided May 23.

America's interscholastic rowing championship will be settled on May 23 at the sixth annual regatta of the American Rowing Association, to be held on the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia. The Stewards have already received the bona fide entries of five school crews, representing the strongest schoolboy oarsmen of this country, and there is every reason to believe that this number will be increased to eight within the next two weeks, making this the finest lot of school crews ever gotten together for any regatta.

The five school crews whose entries have been received to date are the Cascadilla School of Ithaca, N. Y.; the McKinley School of Washington, D. C.; the Georgetown Preparatory School of Washington, D. C., and the Boys' Central High School and the Central Manual School, both of Philadelphia. The other three schools which have written concerning their entry are Stone School of Boston, De Witt Clinton of New York, and the St. John's Military Academy of Delafield, Wis. BABY LEFT IN CHURCH; SOCIETY TO ADOPT IT

The Infant Is Sent Temporarily to Bellevue, but the Women Say They Want to Bring It Up.

The day before yesterday, and theretofore, the basement door of the Greek Orthodox Church, Holy Trinity, at Seventy-second Street and Lexington Avenue, could be opened without the slightest sound. It always stood unlocked.

But yesterday there was a shrill bell attached to the door, which rang sharply whenever the door was opened. Moreover, whenever the door did open or the bell rang there was a quick movement on the part of the janitor and of those members of the Ladies' Aid Society who happened to be present to see who entered.

For on the previous day some one, taking advantage of the fact that the door latch was always out, had slipped into the janitor's room in the basement and left in his bed a two weeks' old boy baby. The janitor and ladies are glad the baby came to the church, but do not wish, nevertheless, to establish such a precedent. Hence the new bell.

It was quite dark and the Ladies' Aid Society had finished its meeting in the rear room of the basement when there came a squeak from the janitor's room. The members of the society acted variously. The unmarried members got on chairs.

"It's a mouse," they said.

The married members listened attentively.

"It's a baby," they asserted.

Leaving the unmarried members still on their chairs, the married members hurried to the janitor's room. On the bed was a little white bundle. As they drew near the little squeak was repeated.

One of the women more bold than her sisters went to the bed and threw back a blanket. A baby blinked up at her.

The question arose what was to be done with the infant.

"Notify the police," said the janitor.

But word went about the room:

"It's a Greek Church baby, and the Greek Church should take care of its own."

So the police were not notified. Instead, one of the members of the society took the baby home. Yesterday the society was about to meet to discuss what was to be the ultimate disposition of the baby when a policeman arrived. The janitor, possibly not relishing the idea of a church baby, had telephoned to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station.

The baby was taken to Bellevue.

"But we want it here," said the members of the Ladies' Aid Society.

"You can claim it at Bellevue," the policeman told them.

So the members of the society haven't given up the idea of adopting the church baby. To-day there will be a special meeting of the society, when steps looking to its adoption will be taken.

HERTS BROS. BANKRUPT.

Firm of Interior Decorators Owe $200,000—Fitted Many Hotels.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Herts Brothers, a corporation, interior decorations and architectural woodwork, 28 West Thirty-eighth Street, by Epstein Brothers, attorneys for these creditors: Arnold Constable & Co., $460; Julius E. Siegel, $230, and Alexander Reiman, $230.

It was alleged that the corporation is insolvent, and made preferential payments of $5,000 to various creditors whose names are unknown. The business was started in 1877 and incorporated Feb. 7, 1902 with a capital stock of $250,000, but has had no rating at Bradstreet's for the last four years.

Epstein Brothers said that the creditors were friendly and desired that the business should go on without interruption to carry out large contracts. Inability to renew loans at the banks precipitated the trouble.

Myers & Goldsmith, attorneys for Herts Brothers, said last evening that the liabilities are estimated at $200,000, of which $50,000 is for merchandise and $150,000 confidential debts to banks and friends.

The concern has done a large business in artistic furniture and interior woodwork and has furnished the Hotel St. Regis, the Knickerbocker, the Woodward, and Murray Hill Hotels, the New York Produce Exchange Bank, Columbia Bank, and Union Square Bank, also the Criterion, Progress, and Colonial Clubs, and fitted up the yachts of William Astor and others.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Japanese Copying Papers Must Stand Heavy Compound Duties.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers that Japanese copying paper must pay compound rates of duty and cannot be admitted at lower rates as specified in certain paragraphs of the Dingley law.

The evidence adduced before the board showed that some of the paper is hand made and the remainder machine made. Duty was exacted at the rate of 6 cents a pound and 15 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in the law for "copying paper." It was alleged by H. C. Davison & Co. of New York that the merchandise should be admitted to duty either at the rate of 25 per cent. as "paper not specially provided for," or else at 2 cents a pound and 10 per cent. ad valorem as "hand-made paper weighing not less than 10 pounds per ream."

The paper is used chiefly for making letter-copying books, and has a tan or buff shade or color. Because that shade or color is the natural shade or color of the paper, due to the pigment contained in the bark out of which it is made, the importers argued that it does not fall within the provisions of the tariff paragraph for "copying paper."

General Appraiser Fischer, who writes the decision for the board, says that, after weighing the testimony, it is obvious that the classification imposed by the customs authorities is correct. The protest is overruled.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks in Reactionary Movement —Call Money Rates, 1¾ @2 Per Cent.

BUYING POWER DIMINISHES

From irregularity the stock market passed into a reactionary stage yesterday, and before the end of the day active shares fell from 1 to 3 points, with the list as a whole well down from Wednesday night's level. The movement was sufficiently explained by technical conditions alone. Practically all the buying power in the market since the close of last week has come from operations, "under the rule," involved in the McIntyre and Coster failures, and the efforts of bearish speculators, intimidated by these failures, to recover the stocks sold by them. From this source came the impetus for the two "million share" days of Tuesday and Wednesday, and it was plainly to be seen yesterday that this great volume of transactions reduced the outstanding short interest to very moderate proportions. Business yesterday was only half that of the preceding day. There were, however, other factors not without some force in the making of sentiment, and for the moment they were largly adverse. The Committee on Car Efficiency of the American Railway Association reported an unexpected increase of 68,263 idle cars between April 1 and 15, bringing the total of unemployed equipment of this kind upon the country's railways up to 375,624, a record figure. In spite of this showing, however, the day's earnings statements from various railroads were rather more favorable. The Reading reported a loss of only $328,000 in net for all companies for March. For the same period, the Union Pacific reported a falling off of $854,000 in gross and $205,000 in net, and the Southern Pacific a decrease of $808,000 in gross, and an increase of $125,000 in net. The Pennsylvania reduced a gross loss of $2,169,000 to a net loss of $544,000. The statements of these roads for March are better, not because of any increase in business, as the idle car report shows, but because of econo.my in operation. The Pennsylvania Directors are expected to meet to-day and to reduce the dividend from a 7 per cent. to a 6 per cent. basis. While this prospect proved depressing upon the company's shares and to some extent upon the market generally yesterday, if it becomes a fact it will really be a step in the right direction. Prices advanced sharply on grain markets, but the rise had reference not so much to the condition of Winter wheat as to the position of the world's supplies and the situation in other producing countries. A private "crop expert," whose calculations are widely read, after a visit to the fields, reported yesterday a condition for Winter wheat practically equaling that of April 1. Westinghouse Electric fell 9 points on sales based on unfavorable inferences drawn from President Westinghouse's letter urging stockholders to assume their share of the new financing if they wish to save the company.

To the Sub-Treasury the banks have lost thus far in the week $3,324,000, the greater part of this arising from the return of United States deposits. Money rates as yet show very little change either by reason of the gold shipments or the Treasury withdrawals, although the bulk of such withdrawals will probably be delayed until May 9, the date of the first payment required. Foreign exchange rates were practically unchanged and no engagements were announced, perhaps, because favorable steamer connections for Paris cannot be made until Saturday. The Bank of England's usually weekly report made the strongest showing at this season in over a decade.

Advances on Bad Weather News—Closes Strong 31 to 35 Points Up.

Cotton had a sharp advance yesterday on reports of cold weather. The market closed firm, 31 to 35 points net higher. Sales were estimated at 375,000 bales.

The opening was at an advance of 12@16 points on firmness in Liverpool. After selling 22 to 28 points net higher prices reacted on the warmer weather, but soon rallied again.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Hard to Read Market.

There was a resumption of scalping tactics among traders in yesterday's market, presumably on the idea that there must be, for the present at least, a continuance of irregularity. It is doubtful whether there was quite so much profit in this trading as there was before the recent advance, when the prices of a few of the important stocks fluctuated for several weeks within a range of three or four points. It served to show the inability of some of the traders to accept any fixed position on the market and the variation in the methods of reading the tape signs. Many brokers advised their customers that the market will be temporarily irregular because of profit-taking. Others took the position that it was a distributing market, and that ultimately the short side of the account would be the more profitable. It was also not impossible to find good traders and brokers who regarded the reaction as temporary, entirely logical and not likely to interfere at all with what they termed the ultimate upward movement. The irregularity in the market is reflected in the mixed sentiment and variable views. Perhaps one of the prime deterring influences, so far as professional bears are concerned, is the impending issue of bonds.

Predictions Not Verified.

Apparently, some of the traders and many of the brokers were not prepared for the sinking spell which the market experienced in the afternoon. Union Pacific was regarded as the key to the market. It had shown a tendency to fluctuate a little more widely than St. Paul, for example, and when in the last hour it approximated in price the opening figures, it seemed to be an even bet that it would close as well as on the preceding evening, and at all events would not show any particularly large net loss. The subsequent weakness developed quickly and resulted in a sharp reaction. Brokers said that their customers were puzzled, and even those on the floor were not very free in the matter of specific advice. There has been more or less of a mystery in the advance, and not very much light is obtainable with regard to the inner workings of the speculative machinery on the recession. The theory that some of the unconverted bears were making a fight was offered and accepted by those whose position in the market was on the short side.

Pennsylvania Dividend To-day.

So far as the traders are concerned the action of the Pennsylvania Directors, at their meeting to-day, is all cut and dried, and no one need wait for the official declaration to know just what is to be done. It has been accepted as a fact that the dividend to be declared will be at the rate of 6 per cent. instead of the customary 7 per cent. Furthermore, it is pointed out that this action is conservative and logical, and that no one, no matter how much he may analyze it, can find any speculative influence in it one way or the other. Consequently, there should be no desire on the part of traders to hear what the Directors may do, but probably the same interest will be manifested and the same doubts felt as to what action will be taken until such action is fully indicated in the regular official way. Brokers advise their customers that they believe the dividend will be at the rate of 6 per cent., and they point out as confirmatory of that the earnings of the company and the announcement that the company had more idle cars reported during April than at any other time since the beginning of the year. Philadelphia reports agree more or less generally with the local gossip, but in the meantime the good effect of the bond sale is still felt.

Big Blocks of Bonds Wanted.

It is reported among bond traders that any security that cannot be unqualifiedly classed as good is not likely to find a very ready market in the financial district. Another point that bond men make is the rather insistent demand for good-sized blocks of good railroad bonds. One young broker was commissioned yesterday to find a block of $200,000 of railroad bonds which would net something between 4 and 4½ per cent., by which he understood anything netting 4⅛ or 4¼ per cent. He went to other brokers whom he knew to be in touch with such markets and found, somewhat to his surprise, that there were many inquiries of the same character, entirely distinct, so far as regards source, from his own, and furthermore that there was a scanty offering of such desirable blocks. Smaller lots could be obtained, but they did not fill the bill, of course. Generally, bond men agree that in this respect the bond business is spotty, and that it is likely to continue so, for the present at least. Stock traders and bond brokers heard yesterday that the bona fide oversubscription to the Pennsylvania loan was two and a half times.

Commission Bills Smaller.

No surprises were found in the published statements of earnings of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, as submitted yesterday. The decrease in the net for Southern Pacific for a period of nine months was in excess of $7,000,000 and for the same period in Union Pacific approximately $2,800,000. Traders scanned the figures closely, but there was no speculative inspiration in them. Crop news continues to be regarded as an influence for good in the market, but those conservatively inclined take the position that it is a long time to harvest. One thing that might indicate that the big market and the rapid advance recently were not general is found in statements made by specialists and two-dollar men. One of the latter said yesterday that during the month of March he collected $1,500, while he did not expect that his bills going out for the month of April would foot up $500. He remarked incidentally that early in the month he received a check from a certain house for services rendered in March, but as usual did not deposit it until the bulk of his commission checks had been received. The day he deposited it the firm suspended.

HEPBURN RATE LAW IS IN EFFECT TO-DAY

Attorney General Will Bring Suits at Once to Test Constitutionality of Act.

COAL ROADS ARE HIT HARD

Under New Law Railroads Are Barred from Transporting Commodities In Which They Have an Interest.

The commodity clause of the Hepburn Rate law barring railroads engaged in inter-State commerce from transporting coal or other commodities, barring lumber, in which the railroads have any interest direct or indirect goes into effect to-day. The railroads most directly affected are the coal roads including the Reading, the Lehigh Valley, the Delaware & Hudson, the Lackawanna, the Erie, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and other lines to less extent. The railroads will refuse to comply with the law, and within a few days, it is expected, Attorney General Bonaparte will bring suit against some one of them and possibly against all of them, to enforce the penalty of $5,000 on each car shipped, which is the fine provided in the act for infringement of its provisions.

This course will be in keeping with an agreement reached some time ago between the Attorney General and counsel for the coal roads headed by Robert De Forest, general counsel for the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The Attorney General has agreed not to enter any suit against the railroads based on this commodity clause other than the test suits to legally determine the constitutionality of the act. Were it not for this agreement with the Attorney General, the coal roads alone would subject themselves by contesting the law to daily fines estimated at over $16,000,000. Such penalties would be ruinous, but as matters stand, barring the understanding with the Attorney General, the roads would have no alternative but to incur these fines or give up the transportation of coal.

This is the clause in the Hepburn bill:

From and after May 1, 1908, it shall be unlawful for any railroad company to transport from any State, territory, or the District of Columbia to any other State, territory, or the District of Columbia, or to any foreign country, any article or commodity other than timber and the manufactured products thereof manufactured, mined, or produced by it or under its authority or which it may own in whole or in part or in which it may have any interest, direct or indirect, except such articles or commodities as may be necessary and intended for its use in the conduct of its business as a common carrier.

A bill was recently introduced in Congress providing that the imposition of fines under the clause should be postponed for a year, but this bill has never been enacted into law.

The suits will be brought in one of the Federal courts, but it could not be learned yesterday in what part of the country the Attorney General would begin them. The interests affected by the commodity clause cover a much wider range than those affected by the Northern Securities decision.

The magnitude of the interests affected is apparent from the vast amount of capital which the coal roads have invested in coal mine property and in its operation, and from the fact that it directly affects at least 50,000,000 tons of the annual anthracite output, amounting to about 60,000,000 tons. The Reading's interest in coal properties represents a capitalization of over $93,000,000, the Lehigh Valley's over $32,000,000, exclusive of coal properties controlled through other companies, while the Lackawanna and the Delaware & Hudson, both of which mine and handle their coal directly, have invested in this department $61,000,000 and $75,000,000, respectively.

Practically every important system in the country is affected to a greater or less extent. The Pennsylvania Railroad is part owner of several steel manufacturing companies, the Pennsylvania Steel and the Cambria Steel Companies among them; the central Western roads and some roads in the South have interests in bituminous coal fields, and many of the Western roads are sole owners of important coal fields as well as of other undertakings, the products of which fall under the restrictions of the Hepburn law. The Denver & Rio Grande holds $10,000,000 stock of the Utah Fuel Company, and the Union Pacific owns the Union Pacific Coal Company and other similar companies. The Northern Pacific and the Wisconsin Central, among other roads, are the owners of iron ore lands, and so is the Delaware & Hudson.

CURB MARKET.

The Curb Market continues strong and is steadily becoming more active. The recession in prices is over and the upward movement is being resumed. The market is technically in a good position, money is easy and plentiful, and business continues to show improvement. Under these conditions established curb stocks of merit should be bought, as they give every promise of a substantial price enhancement.

TRUST MERGER CALLED OFF.

Equitable and Mercantile Decide to Abandon Plan and Go It Alone.

After a court decision that no legal obstacle lay in the way of the merger of the Equitable and the Mercantile Trust Companies, the stockholders at separate meetings yesterday voted to abandon the consolidation idea and continue each company as a separate institution.

Alvin W. Krech, President of the Equitable, said after the meeting that the merger idea had been abandoned simply because conditions had changed since last Fall. Both companies, he said, had made such a good showing during the panic times when they took an active part in the rescue work of the Associated Trust Companies, that they had gained considerably in patronage and strength. No dividends have been paid pending the settlement of the merger question, and yesterday the boards of the respective companies declared dividends at the regular rate to cover the period. The Equitable declared 9 per cent. and the Mercantile 30 per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

APPROVES FINANCES OF INTERBOROUGH

Utilities Board Reports That It Has Completed the Investigation of That Concern.

VICTORY FOR THE COMPANY

Board Wished to Resume Inquiry After Approving $55,000,000 Mortgage, but Company Would Not Consent.

From a memorandum issued by the Public Service Commission in connection with the approval of the fifty-five-million-dollar bond issue of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company it was learned yesterday that the commission had concluded its traction inquiry, so far as concerns that corporation. The memorandum is, in effect, a report upon the financial status of the Interborough, which has thereby received the O. K. of the commission, so far as its finances are concerned. That the commission's approval should be thus expressed is considered a victory for the company, for the question whether such sanction should accompany the approval of the mortgage was one long in dispute between the officials of the Interborough Company and the Public Service Commission.

Various proposals were advanced on behalf of the commission. One of them was that the commission should suspend its inquiry into the Interborough, pass upon the mortgage, and at a subsequent date take up the inquiry again. This was rejected flatfooted by the company, on the ground that if the bonds were issued with the approval of the commission or were used as security for an issue of notes, such as is now being made, the investors might stand to lose heavily if the commission at a subsequent time began again to investigate the company and ultimately pass criticism on its finances.

The most interesting item in the report of the commission upon the Interborough is that relating to the Subway equipment account, which on the balance sheet of June 30, 1907, represented a cost to the company of $25,147,451. This account was analyzed and audited by Marvyn Scudder, the expert accountant who advised the commission throughout its traction investigation. It stood on the books of the company at $24,768,903.46 at the end of the calendar year 1907, exclusive of real estate. When the commission was investigating traction affairs last Fall a lot of interesting items appeared charged up to the Subway construction account as an asset, including discount on securities, lawyers' fees, National Civic Federation subscription, press agents' salaries, and the publication of a souvenir book, in which some nice things were said about August Belmont. Mr. Scudder reported that items of this character came to $1,302,817, which he took out of the Subway equipment account and put in a new account, to be known as "Contractors' Expense Account." The importance of this step is that the items so segregated will not be considered as assets for the purpose of the mortgage, which is a lien upon all the property of the Interborough.

The commission's expert engineer, Mr. McLimont, who made a careful investigation of the physical condition of the Subway equipment, makes this report as to his findings:

"The general design and capacity of the working parts of the equipment are good and sufficient to meet the present requirements of the system. I found that the equipment was all in thoroughly first-class operative condition, having been exceptionally well maintained, and, in fact, in some instances the original apparatus has been improved since its installation, and depreciations should be set at the minimum for each part of the property."

The memorandum contains also the estimate of the company's auditor, based on the actual income expenditure for the first three months of the calendar year, with consideration for the actual earnings of the last calendar year. This is the estimate for the year 1908:

Gross earnings	$24,959,728
Operating expenses	10,903,996
Net earnings	14,055,732
Other income	1,070,772
Gross income	15,126,504
Interest, rentals, and taxes	6,896,832
Balance	8,229,672
7% on Manhattan Railway stock	4,200,000
Net income	4,029,672
Dividends on $55,000,00 I. R. T. stk.	3,150,000
Surplus	$879,672

The commissin reports that an item of $275,000 should, for the purpose of conservatism, be eliminated from this surplus, inasmuch as that represents the estimate of the company as to its probable additional income from the Atlantic Avenue Subway extension in Brooklyn. With this reduction, however, the commission notes that the net income is still more than sufficient to meet the requirements of the company with its new financing.

It appears from the memorandum that the operations of the Interborough have been sufficiently profitable to enable the operating account to advance to the capital account the sum of $3,462,685 in the course of the construction that has been done since the original installation of the system. The company has sought leave to issue bonds to repay this advance to operating account. The commission does not pass on the application, inasmuch as the Interborough Rapid Transit Company has still a minimum obligation to the construction company of $3,771,147 on account of the construction of the Brooklyn extension.

The commission disposes of the question raised as to the validity of the Interborough's investment in the stock of the Subway Realty Company, which owns the Belmont Hotel, by finding that there is warrant for such investment under Sections 40 and 42 of the stock corporation law, and under Article XII. of the Interborough's certificate of incorporation. It rejects all of the grounds on which C. H. Venner, who has figured in many corporation litigations, protested against the issuance of the mortgage.

THE FOREIGN MARKET.

LONDON, April 30.—Money was firmer and in increased demand on the market to-day, the calls amounting to four millions. Discounts were quiet.

Trading on the Stock Exchange developed dullness and a reactionary tendency. Bad weather affected home rails, while realizations over to-morrow's holiday eased gilt-edged securities. Paris sold foreigners, Rio Tintos, and diamond shares.

American Securities developed irregularity after the recent spurt, and parity was barely maintained in the forenoon, although Illinois Central and Missouri Pacific ruled steady. Later prices sagged, but New York supported the market in the afternoon, and this caused a firmer close.

Money, 2@2¾ per cent.

The Stock Exchange will be closed to-morrow.

PARIS, April 30.—The tone on the Bourse to-day was heavy. The private rate of discount was 2¾ per cent., an advance of 1-16.

BERLIN, April 30.—Trading on the Boerse to-day was sluggish and prices mostly were lower. Baltimore & Ohio was quoted higher and Pennsylvania was lower.

FREE PAPER ALONE WOULD LOWER PRICE

Trust Official Admits That Passage of Stevens Bill Would Give Relief.

TOLD PUBLISHER THIS

Had Just Raised His Rate from $1.90 Per Hundred to $2.50—Evidence of Threat Shown Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Testifying before the select committee investigating the paper industries, Gen. Felix Agnus, publisher of The Baltimore American, today surprised the committee by saying that he had it on the authority of the Vice President of the International Paper Company that the passage of the Stevens bill, and that alone, would obtain for the publishers a lower price on paper.

"Under a contract with the international Paper Company," he said, "I have been paying $2.50 per hundred for print paper since Jan. 1, instead of the $1.90 paid for the two years preceding. That meant an increase of $12 a ton, and that means to me an added expenditure of $70,000 a year. It makes it almost impossible to continue the publication of a one-cent paper."

"Well," said Mr. Mann, "if it should develop that other causes than the tariff have contributed in part to this increase, would you still insist on the free listing of wood pulp and print paper?"

"I would," replied Gen. Angus.

"Why?" asked Chairman Mann.

"Because it would mean cheaper paper," replied the publisher. "I was talking two hours ago to Vice President Wheeler of the Paper Trust, and I was telling him that I intended to bring forward some effective arguments against his trust, and asked him if I made a good case of it would he give me a lower rate.

"'No, indeed,' he replied. 'That rate will stay there until you get the Stevens bill passed. Then I will give you a lower rate.' I think that proves my point."

While Gen. Agnus was speaking, Mr. Wheeler was in the room waiting to testify. He did not get an opportunity to make a statement before the committee took a recess.

John Norris of THE NEW YORK TIMES continued his testimony. He said the first unwreas in the Speaker's resolution misrepresented facts, in that it alleged that it had been asserted that a burden of $60,000,000 would be laid on the publishing interests alone, while, as a matter of fact, the burden would fall on all the consumers of paper, wall paperers, stationers, &c.

Chairman Mann waved a letter from Herman Ridder at Mr. Norris, and said that the Speaker's statement was expressed in that letter practically complete and that he thought there must be error in the publisher's statements.

Mr. Norris then explained that Mr. Ridder's statement was only intended as a rough approximation of the facts, and as the newspaper end of the paper business consumed by far the largest part of all manufactured papers, he did not think the error was important, particularly as Congress was as much interested in protecting other branches of the industry.

Mr. Norris offered in evidence a mass of clippings from newspapers and paper trade journals, designed, he said, to explain why the publishers had been influenced in making statements with respect to combinations. These were mostly of dates in 1907. The challenge, he contended, was distinctly thrown down to the publishers that there would be an increase in the price of news print paper, through an editorial of March 14, 1907, in The Paper Trade Journal.

"Is that evidence of a threat?" Mr. Mann inquired, "or just a slam of their side?"

"Distinctly a challenge," the witness replied, which assertion, he said, was borne out by the announcement that paper was going to 3 cents a pound and that it would be two years before newspapers could get themselves in shape to break a combination of that character.

One of the clippings referred to Mr. Hanrahan of 26 Broadway, New York, as having had something to do with forming a paper trust.

"I don't think he had anything to do with the Standard Oil Company," Mr. Norris replied.

"Is it possible," inquired Mr. Mann, with mock surprise, "for anybody to live that close to 26 Broadway without becoming contaminated by the Standard Oil Company?"

"It all depends," responded the witness amid laughter, "whether it is a newspaper man or a Congressman."

SCHWAB TIRED OF MINES.

His Experience in the Montgomery-Shoshone Venture Discourages Him.

Charles M. Schwab admitted yesterday that he was getting tired of mining ventures. His Montgomery-Shoshone Consolidated Mining Company, which the experts have reported on unfavorably, had then made a further break in the Curb market to 75 cents a share.

Mr. Schwab was asked how he explained the discrepancies between the roseate view he and his associates took of the mines in Nevada, when the stock was first floated, and the discouraging announcement sent out to stockholders on Wednesday.

"It is all due to the deterioration of the ore at depth," said Mr. Schwab. "Of course, that is one of the gambling chances involved in mining, and it is a bitter disappointment. The last report made by the company's engineers only a few months ago was still most encouraging.

"When the three adjoining properties which comprise the consolidated company were purchased, they were the sensation of the Nevada camp. There was an enormous body of gold and silver ore extending at the surface across practically all three properties, and the early development work showed splendid results. The mine looked like a bonanza."

Mr. Schwab said he was the heaviest loser in the venture. Besides his heavy stock interests, he said he had advanced $500,000 cash to the company last year when money was needed to put up a mill on the property.

FAIR SHOWING FOR RAILWAYS.

Harriman Lines Report Smaller Losses Than Were Expected.

Several important railroad statements for the month of March were made public yesterday, including the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Pennsylvania. While all three showed continued loss in gross, the loss in net was smaller in proportion than during the earlier months of the year.

The Union Pacific showed a decrease of $854,786 in gross and a decrease of $206,107 in net, while the Southern Pacific reported a loss of $806,595 in gross and an actual gain of $125,882 in net.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's report for March showed a decrease of $2,169,800 in gross, but a loss of only $544,500 in net. The Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg showed a loss of $1,360,200 in gross and a decrease of only $95,300 in net.

The Directors of the Pennsylvania are expected to meet in Philadelphia to-day to act on the road's dividend. The feeling has prevailed in the financial district for some time that the rate will be reduced from 7 per cent. to 6 per cent.

ENJOINS GAS BOND ISSUE.

The plan of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, a thirty-million-dollar corporation controlling the California Gas and Electric Corporation and the San Francisco Gas and Electric Company, to exchange its four-and-a-half-million-dollar issue of 6 per cent. serial debenture bonds for a like issue of thirty-year mortgage bonds has been temporarily held up by an injunction granted yesterday by Justice Dowling, in the Supreme Court.

It was said at the office of N. W. Halsey & Co., who are interested in the financing of the company, that the plan had been approved by 90 per cent. of the debenture holders and that the management of the company had every confidence in defeating the injunction proceedings when the case comes up for a hearing, on May 7.

NEW STOCK EXCHANGE FIRM.

Britton, Marden & Co. Organized—Changes in Other Houses.

A number of changes in the make-up of Stock Exchange copartnerships, which usually occur around May 1, were announced yesterday. The financial flurry which brokers have passed through in the last year has kept down the formation of new brokerage houses. With one exception, there was not a single new brokerage house reported in the announcements yesterday.

Charles P. Britton, who has been a member of the Stock Exchange since March 18, 1875; Francis Skiddy Marden, who has been associated with the firm of Dominick & Dominick for the last eight years, and Henry B. Britton, a son of Charles P. Britton, have organized the brokerage firm of Britton, Marden & Co., with offices at 111 Broadway.

The firm of Drake, Mastin & Co. of the Drexel Building has been superseded by a new copartnership under the name of J. Edward Mastin & Co., which will continue the old business. Herbert H. Drake has retired from the firm on account of ill-health.

The firm of Waterman, Anthony & Co. was dissolved yesterday, owing to the retirement of N. W. Anthony from the firm. The remaining partners of the firm will continue the business under the name of Waterman & Co., with offices at 67 Exchange Place and 5 West Fifty-eighth Street. The members of Waterman & Co. will be E. D. Morgan Waterman, Albert McClave, Curd A. Clemons.

George H. Miles, formerly manager of the bond department of Shoemaker, Bates & Co., will enter into partnership to-day with Henry Murphy & Brothers, at 33 Wall Street.

J. M. Martin & Co. of 52 Broadway announce that E. J. Drummond has retired from their firm, and that Alfred Nicolovius has been admitted to partnership.

Elbert W. King has been admitted to membership in the firm of Wassermann Brothers.

E. T. Tefft & Co. of 5 Nassau Street have been succeeded by Tefft, Wallace & Co., which includes all of the old firm members, with the addition of Walter T. Wallace of the former firm of Knox, Wallace & Co.

Grannis & Lawrence, bankers of 10 Wall Street, announce that William C. Langley, heretofore special partner, has been admitted to the firm as a general partner.

MORAWETZ OUT OF ATCHISON.

After Twelve Years He Retires from Active Part in the Road's Affairs.

Victor Morawetz, who has been identified with the Atchison ever since its reorganization twelve years ago, has decided to retire from active participation in the management of that road. Until a year ago he was General Counsel of the road, and is still Chairman of the Executive Committee. He made known his intention to give up active participation in the management of the road in this statement, issued yesterday:

"I expect to retire, at least temporarily, from the Atchison management, in order to obtain rest, and also to obtain time for other work, which I have been compelled to lay aside for several years. My resignation is not due to any loss of interest in the company or to any difference of views.

"The company does not need my services at this time, as its property and finances are in good order, and no important questions of policy are likely to come up during this year."

Supplementing this statement, Mr. Morawetz said last night that whether he resigned from the Directorate of the Atchison as well as from the Executive Committee would depend on whether or not he felt he could get rid of his responsibilities in connection with the road's affairs without retiring from the board.

WESTINGHOUSE STOCK DROPS

It Slumps 9½ Points in 2 Hours, Following an Alarming Circular.

The stock of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company dropped from Wednesday's closing price of 55½ to 46 in the first two hours of trading yesterday. After transactions of 7,000 shares, the stock recovered to 47¾.

The slump was generally attributed to the circular sent out on Wednesday night by President Westinghouse urging stockholders to come in under the readjustment plan, which provides for the subscription by stockholders of $6,000,000 new stock, while the merchandise creditors agree to take $4,000,000. President Westinghouse concluded his appeal to the stockholders with the words:

"If you do not subscribe you in effect vote for a sale of the property by the creditors, and thus the elimination of all stock interests."

The declines led to rumors that the readjustment plan which was put out early in April was in danger of failing because of the lack of response from the stockholders. This was denied by officers of the company yesterday. So far, out of the company's 4,000 stockholders something less than 600 have responded to the calls for subscriptions, but the committee has until May 15 to get sufficient subscriptions to make the plan operative.

INTER-MET NOTES ALLOTTED.

Small Subscribers Get All They Bid for—Pennsylvania Bond Issue To-day.

The allotments of Interborough Rapid Transit notes were made yesterday, and those of Pennsylvania Railroad bonds will probably be made to-day. The smaller subscribers to the Interborough notes got the full amount of notes applied for, and the larger subscribers 50 per cent. of their subscriptions.

In the case of the twenty-million-dollar Pennsylvania issue it was learned yesterday that no allotments will be made to those who subscribed to a few bonds. It was explained that to have allotted bonds to such subscribers would have taken the entire issue, and no allotments could have been made to the larger subscribers. It was therefore decided to limit the allotments to those who subscribed for a round amount, and these will get a small percentage of the amount applied for.

The issue will be evenly divided between this country and Europe.

Adjudged Member of Failed Firm.

BOSTON, April 30.—Patrick Lennox of Lynn was adjudged by a referee to be a member of the firm of the P. Lennox Company, morocco manufacturers of Lynn, which made an assignment on Sept. 5, 1907, with liabilities of $1,550,000 and nominal assets. Lennox asserted that he retired from the firm several years ago. The referee decided that he had never completely severed his connection with the firm, and was jointly with his son, James Lennox, liable for the debts of the firm.

Arthur Turnbull Temporary President, in Place of George M. Cumming.

At the adjourned annual meeting of the stockholders of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company yesterday the number of Directors was formally reduced from thirty to twenty-one in keeping with the plan outlined in THE TIMES yesterday. Resignations and deaths had reduced the number by the close of last year to twenty-three, and since then two more Directors, it was learned yesterday had resigned. They were George G. Haven, Jr., and William B. Leeds.

The vacancy caused by the resignation of George M. Cumming, former President of the company, was filled by the election of L. C. Krauthoff. The board was elected in three classes to serve one, two, and three years respectively.

No permanent President was chosen to take Mr. Cumming's place, but Arthur Turnbull, one of the Vice Presidents and formerly active in the management of the company, was made Acting President pending consideration of the choice of a permanent President. Bronx After Brooklyn's Scalp.

Thoroughly aroused by the prominence given to real estate in Long Island and New Jersey by the opening of the East and Hudson River tunnels, representative real estate brokers and business men of the Bronx have formed an auxiliary committee of the North Side Board of Trade for the purpose of carrying on an energetic campaign to attract public attention to the advantages of the borough beyond the Harlem.

James L. Wells presided at a meeting held on Wednesday evening, and urged the raising of a fund for advertising the Bronx, to which Messrs. Mehltretter, Davies, Price, and others offered to contribute. Mr. Wells said he thought the large property owners who would derive the most benefit from its development should also be asked to subscribe. Albert E. Davis said that an edition of 5,000 copies of "A Bronx Catechism," describing the advantages of the borough, was being distributed, and that copies were being sent to Long Island and New Jersey.

M'INTYRE STOCKS ARE STILL MISSING

Partners in Wrecked Brokerage House Deny All Knowledge of $400,000 in Securities.

CLIENTS CLAMOR FOR THEM

Counsel for the Head of the Firm Hints That He Was Not Mentally Responsible.

With the head of the firm recuperating in a sanitarium in this city after a hurried return from his country place in North Carolina, the examination of the remaining partners in the wrecked Stock Exchange house of T. A. McIntyre & Co. was begun yesterday before Commissioner Gilchrist in the Federal Building in an endeavor to find out what has become of some $400,000 in missing securities which clients of the house have been demanding from the receivers.

Little light was thrown on that phase of the firm's troubles, and about all that Irving L. Ernst, counsel for Receiver Burlingham, was able to bring out was the complete subordination of the management of the 71 Broadway offices to the head of the firm.

Mr. McIntyre has not yet been served with a subpoena to appear before the Commissioner, but his personal counsel, Maurice Leon of 60 Wall Street, was present at the hearing and gave assurance to Mr. Ernst that he would produce Mr. McIntyre when he was needed. Mr. Leon occasionally took part in the examination of the two partners, George R. Ryan and Edward F. White, who had their innings on the stand. Mr. Leon is apparently endeavoring to establish that his client had not been entirely responsible for his conduct for some time before the failure.

When Mr. White was on the stand Mr. Leon tried to bring out that a week before the suspension the head of the concern had been acting peculiarly. Mr. White denied that he had noticed anything out of the ordinary the matter with him, although he had seemed somewhat despondent.

The first witness was Frederick H. Lockwood, an insurance broker, who was questioned about certain notes of the Hardware Publishing Company amounting to $2,500. The concern publishes a trade paper, which was the property of the late Mrs. McIntyre. He testified that he had no interest in the notes of the concern in his possession, which he had received from Mr. McIntyre shortly before the suspension.

The testimony of George R. Ryan, the Syracuse partner, whose investigations of the firm's books revealed the conditions which resulted in the suspension, was unable to shed any light on the whereabouts of the missing securities.

He said he had started his investigation of the firm's standing because he was not satisfied with replies Mr. McIntyre made to his questions. He had put $200,000 of his own and his friends' money into the concern, he said. One of the first things he discovered in looking over the books was that Account No. 275 was short. This account, he said, he understood, was Mr. McIntyre's.

Arthur C. Peck, who was originally made the assignee of the firm and is now the co-receiver, made the investigation for Mr. Ryan. His investigations disclosed liabilities of about $800,000 and assets of only about $400,000. Mr. Ryan testified that his own assets consisted of a balance at the State Bank of Syracuse, where he had pledged his $19,000 life insurance policy as security for a loan of $6,500. He said he had bought a $14,000 house about a year and a half ago, on which there was a mortgage of $3,500.

Mr. Ryan was cross-examined by several attorneys for customers of the firm, who wanted to know what had become of various stocks and bonds, which their clients say are their property. He said that he knew nothing of that end of the business, which had been in the hands of Mr. McIntyre and his confidential clerks.

The testimony of Mr. White, who handled the "buy" and "sell" slips of the concern, showed how little the partners were allowed to know of the actual condition of accounts. He said that the first he knew of the firm's difficulties was on the day preceding the failure, when he overheard Mr. McIntyre say "things look bad."

The officials of the Stock Exchange are investigating the failure independently. The firm's board member was suspended at the time of the assignment. If it is found that the business was not conducted within the rules of the Exchange, the suspended member may be expelled.

COSTER ASSETS UNKNOWN.

Assignee Says No Attempt Has Been Made to Schedule Them.

Louis Werner, assignee of the failed Stock Exchange house of Coster, Knapp & Co., said yesterday afternoon that it was not yet possible for him to form any closer estimate of the liabilities of the firm than he had made on Wednesday, when he placed them at $1,000,000. What the assets of the firm may prove to be he was also unable to say.

Both Mr. Knapp and W. B. Coster were at the office of the firm yesterday, but had nothing to say regarding its affairs.

MAY SEAL MALONEY REPORT.

Court Intimates That Annulment Papers Will Not Be Made Public.

Supreme Court Justice McCall said yesterday that he had not yet looked through the referee's report in the suit which Miss Helen Maloney, daughter of Martin Maloney of the Standard Oil Company, has brought for an annulment of her marriage with Arthur H. Osborne, a young broker. "I do not know what is in the papers," he said, "but I shall closely scrutinize them, and if I find there is anything in them which I do not think is in the interests of public morals to have published, I shall have them sealed."

The lawyers on both sides, as well as the referee, refused to discuss the case in any way yesterday. There is, however, little doubt but that the report is favorable to Miss Maloney, although on what grounds it is difficult to glean. The law on the question of annulment of marriages is clear and the causes few for annulment. It would seem that the only applicable grounds in the present case are that Miss Maloney contracted her marriage with Osborne either under duress or by fraud on his part. The other alternative is the finding of the referee that there was no valid marriage.

PLAN MAY DAY MASS MEETING

On the basis of a permit from the Park Department dated Feb. 25, the Industrial Workers of the World, comprising the unions connected with the Socialist-Labor Party, announced yesterday that they would have a May Day mass meeting this afternoon, preceded by a parade. A permit for the parade was granted by the Police Department on April 28, on the stipulation that no red flags would be carried and that the parade would not take place in busy streets, where it would obstruct traffic.

Neither the Socialist Party nor the Socialist-Labor Party has arranged for open-air demonstrations, which is the first time in years that this has been omitted. As far as can be learned, the non-Socialist unions have made no preparations to celebrate the day.

Wu Ting-fang, Chinese Minister at Washington, will address the last meeting of The Civic Forum in Carnegie Hall next Tuesday night on "The Awakening of China." Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, ex-Minister to Spain, will preside.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Seabury yesterday awarded $15,000 to Mrs. Benedena Barry for the loss of her husband, John Barry, a young mechanic, who was killed on Sept. 23 last by the collapse of a staging while working for Oliver & Burr, contractors, on the Historical Society Building at Albany.

There will be three services at the Church of the Holy Communion next Sunday. At 11 A. M. the Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet will preach on "The Significance and Value of Confirmation"; the Rev. Dr. Courtney will conduct a confirmation service at 4 P. M., and at 8 o'clock Dr. Mottet will speak on "The Religion of the Daily Life."
